The Pacific States should interest themselves in air defense, apart from the national government.

When a committee of rich men from New York called on Abraham Lincoln, told him how much money they had, and urged that he send a good battleship to do nothing but protect New York city, his reply was, that if HE had as much money as they said THEY had, he would build a battleship for himself.

The West Coast States, California, Oregon, Washington, cooperating perhaps with their vigorous neighbors of Vancouver and other points above the Canadian border, might well have a few flying ships of their own, a sort of air militia.

San Francisco, where they combine patriotism with plenty of money, and great civic pride and energy, might well start the idea of a Pacific Coast flying force. That need not be very expensive. A hundred machines to begin with, a hundred plucky young fliers, practising the gentle art of flying at night, and dropping bombs, practicing especially mimic warfare against other flying machines, would constitute an admirable object lesson to the rest of the country.

And if California, in San Francisco, for instance, should start a little flock of one hundred machines, Los Angeles could be relied upon to hurry in with two hundred, Seattle and other coast cities also.

Such machines need not be a total loss.

In the first place, many young gentlemen with rich fathers, not knowing exactly what to do with themselves, extremely anxious to find work worthwhile, and preferably dangerous, would delight in EACH EQUIPPING his individual MACHINE for the service of the Pacific Coast, and of UNCLE SAM, as the nobles in the old days delighted in equipping each his regiment or his fighting ship, for the service of the king.

Two hundred or three hundred high-powered, swift-flying machines, directed by quick and courageous American brains, would be worth more to the safety of the Pacific Coast than a hundred battleships. For the fighters that come, if they do come, will fly miles above the battleships.

They would come less gaily, less confidently, if they knew that TRAINED FLIERS awaited them.

Hideyo Noguchi, who gave his life to fight yellow fever in Africa, will inspire many men. He was born of a proud, warlike race, intensely self-centered, for 2000 years a hermit people. The loyalty of a Japanese was to family, clan, above all to the emperor representing his race. The rest of the world was nothing to him.

Born one generation after Japan opened her doors to the world, Noguchi felt the new spirit of the times. He was loyal to family, clan, emperor, race, but he was devoted chiefly to all human kind.

From boyhood to the last, through poverty and many perils, he studied how to wipe out disease. He discovered the germ of yellow fever, developed serums to prevent the fever or cure it, led in the work that has driven it out of America and will soon put an end to it throughout the world.

Yellow fever killed countless millions of all peoples. Noguchi's skill and devotion have saved the lives of millions too many to estimate, most of them foreigners, to whom his forefathers would have paid no attention, calling them hei-min, or no-folks.

Noguchi's self-sacrifice to human welfare sets an example that is sure to be followed. Perhaps, in time, most men will see that it is better to help one another than to kill or even rob one another.

It is said the Hackensack Indians sold to the white men for so many bars of lead, and some finery, worth altogether $700, land on which now stands the entire city of Newark, N. J., and a great deal of land beyond.

The poor Hackensack chief, with his $700, couldn't buy today enough land for a tight grave at the corner of Broad and Market streets in Newark. Land goes up wonderfully.

And don't forget this. There are just as good bargains today in real estate and in other things as the bargain the white men got when they bought Newark from the Indians. Empty fields will be cities, intersections of country lanes will some day carry skyscrapers.

BUT you must know how and where to choose. Don't use somebody's else's judgment,

Lodge and Curley Lead in First Primary Returns

4 HURT IN SO. BOSTON POLL ROWS

REPUBLICANS CLAIM 'PLOT' IN BALLOT

FIRST STATE RETURNS

Governor Curley and Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., led for the respective Demorcatic and Republican nominations for U. S. Senator in first returns from Mashpee today. Democratic tallies showed: Curley, 50; Greenwood, 2; O'Brien, 0. Republicans: Lodge, 20; Cook, 5.

For lieutenant-governor (D): Philbin, 45; Galvin, 5; Kelly, 4. State treasurer (R): Hurley, 16; Burrell, 16; Andrew, 2. State Auditor (R): Darby, 9; Wood, 3.

Mt. Washington, in the Berkshires, gave Governor Curley a solid bloc of 8 votes. Lodge received 17 against one for Cook. There was no "write-in" vote for O'Brien.

Massachusetts' primary election, in which more than 2000 candidates sought party nominations today, was marked by:

Two street affrays in South Boston, in which four men were beaten, two of them stabbed. One victim was John Gallagher, son of Representative Owen Gallagher.

Charges of Democratic trickery in circulation of a faulty Republican ballot that listed ex-State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell as present incumbent.

General police orders to "pick up all ward heelers molesting voters and bring them in." One arrest for illegal voting in South End.

Light early voting in the cities, with indications of a record rush to polls before closing.

In the South Boston street battles, the 21-year-old son of Representative Gallagher, who is a candidate for the state Senate, was first dragged from his automobile in Dorchester street near Old Colony avenue.

Three men, he said, beat him and his two companions, Patrick O'Donnell, 20, of East street, Dorchester, and Peter Dondrey, 26, of Whipple avenue, Roslindale. The assailants fled.

A few minutes later, at Broadway and F street, when the Gallagher car stopped, another battle ensued. In this all three were beaten again and O'Donnell and Gallagher were stabbed. Gallagher also suffered a broken rib.

At this point Thomas Gordon, 37,

Maine's Anti-Deal Victors

Maine voters started the election ball rolling by rapping the New Deal. Here are three men who went to victory in the anti-New Deal conquest for votes that has been raging in Maine for months. Left to right, United States Senator Walter H. White, Jr., who has been re-elected over Governor Brann; Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows, who has been elected governor of Maine, and Ralph O. Brewster, re-elected for Congress.

Full Maine Returns

Augusta, Me., Sept. 15 — Final figures in the five major contests in Maine were:

United States Senator: White (R.), 159,042; Brann (D.), 153,831. White's majority, 5211.

Governor: Lewis O. Barrows (R.), 172,062; F. Harold Dubord (D.), 131,451. Barrows' majority, 40,611.

First District Congress: James C. Oliver (R.), Townsend and Union party endorsed, defeated Congressman Simon M. Hamlin (D.) by 17,203 votes.

Second District: Clyde H. Smith (R.), endorsed by state Townsend manager defeated three other candidates, including a Townsend candidate and a Union party candidate by 18,326 over his nearest opponent, Congressman Ernest L. McLean (D.).

Third District: Ex-Governor Ralph O. Brewster (R.), Townsendp lan endorsee, won by 19,502 over Congressman Wallace F. Mabee (D.).

By LUTHER CONANT, JR.

Augusta, Me., Sept. 15—The most dramatic and crucial election in the history of Maine gave complete proof today that an aroused electorate had repudiated the New Deal.

A straight Republican triumph was registered with the election of the party's nominees for United States senator and governor and the three congressional candidates.

Full returns showed that Senator Walter H. White, Jr., had polled 159,042 votes against the 153,831 given Governor Louis Brann, a lead of 5211.

Smashing majorities swept into office Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows, G. O. P. gubernatorial nominee and the three Republican Congressional candidates.

An all-time record-breaking vote and the size of the Republican pluralities was the answer today of the Pine Tree State to the Portland visit of Governor Landon.

The lead of Senator White in the face of the great personal popularity of Governor Brann demonstrated that Maine was determined to be in the front line march of the states in the return to American principles of government.

The victory scored by Senator White in Portland was hailed throughout the state as significant of the great surge from the New Deal banner. Two years ago, Governor Brann carried the city by a wide margin.

County after county returned Republican pluralities and amassed a staggering lead for Secretary of State Barrows.

The outcome of the election gave

AMOSKEAG SOLD N. H. GROUP FOR $5,000,000

In a transaction presaging "a new era for Manchester, N. H.," the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. of that city was sold for $5,000,000 today to Amoskeag Industries, Inc., a group of Manchester citizens, who plan revival of the once vast enterprise.

The offer of $5,000,000 was accepted and the sale confirmed by Arthur Black, referee in bankruptcy, in federal court here today.

Referee Black prasied the Manchester citizens who incorporated to save the industry for the city and predicted "the new era."

Amoskeag Industries, Inc., headed by Arthur E. Moreau, former mayor of Manchester, had previously placed a certified check of $500,000 in the hands of the trustees as evidence of good faith.

No other formal offer was mentioned at today's hearing despite a recent report that a New York syndicate, representing British interests, had raised the bid of the Manchester group.

Confirming the sale, Referee Black read an appraisal report made by Thomas F. Prendergast, Joseph O. Tremblay and Arthur Sheldon, giving a total appraisal of $4,776,044 for the properties.

This was divided as follows: Water power, $1,800,000; manufacturing real estate, $200,000; machinery, supplies and equipment, $2,044,527; tenements, residences, unused land outside of mill fence, $731,517. The appraisal did not include certain other properties held in West Helena, Ark.

When Lothrop Withington, attorney, inquired if bond holders would be protected under the sale, W. Rodman Peabody, counsel for trustees, said the purchasers had assets totaling $8,800,000, and that these might be increased to $9,300,000.

The only objection to the sale noted by Referee Black was a letter from Thomas B. Donnellan, a Manchester shareholder, who held that the district court had no jurisdiction in the matter and that the luquidating agent had neglected to advertise the sale.

Charles M. Green of Lynn, an earlier objector, congratulated the purchasers.

Rickenbacker Hops to Northern Wilds to Get Richman

Taking off from Boston Airport in a tri-motored plane before dawn, the Richman-Merrill rescue expedition headed by Captain Eddie Rickenbacker raced darkness toward lonely Musgrave Harbor, N. F., today.

Waiting at Musgrave where they cracked up in a forced landing yesterday, the round-trip ocean fliers, Harry Richman and Dick Merrill, after a night of rest, attempted to get their damaged plane from the bog in which they landed when fuel gave out on the westward hop.

Roaring through threatening weather, Rickenbacker's big transport plane made the flight from Boston to Sydney, N. S., in three hours and 40 minutes.

RICKENBACKER'S WIRE

Landing there to take on an additional load of 258 gallons of gasoline, Rickenbacker wired:

"Arrived here 7:10 (EST). Everything okay. Taking on gas. Hope to arrive Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, about 3:30. This is no place for a straw hat."

Captain Rickenbacker routed his course via Cape North on the extreme tip of Cape Breton, 60 miles

Knickerbocker War Log:

RED STRIFE IN SPAIN COSTS 1000 LIVES EACH DAY

Following is the second of the war logs sent from the Spanish battlefront by H. R. Knickerbocker, famous roving correspondent of International News Service.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

Seville, Sept. 15—"A bird has to bring his dinner with him when he visits Spain." This old peasant proverb was made to fit the landscape beneath us as we flew across old Castille and Leon southeast for Lisbon, and looked down on treeless land so dry and bare it could not suport a goat.

The land was like a dead leaf. Even at 6000 feet altitude we were hot.

We skirted the anti-aircraft batteries of Valladolid and Salamanca and I thought of old Professor Miguel De Unamuno down there in his rector's study at the venerable University of Salamanca, and of how he had told me a short while ago that life was essentially tragic. Spain is certainly getting her share of tragedy.

Kill 1000 a Day

She stayed out of the great war and many said it was a sign that Spain was wise, had learned the lesson that killing is futile. Now Spaniards are killing, not a foreign enemy, but themselves at the rate of 1000 a day, which is a higher rate per head of population than any country suffered in the great war.

It is a greater speed of killing than we had in our own Civil War, and if it were to go on for the length of ours, four years, Spain would lose around 1,500,000 dead.

Happily there is no prospect that it could last so long, although Spaniards are beginning gloomily to predict that this is the beginning of the end for Europe and means the start of this century's thirty year war.

They say the great war to come will not be "to end war" but to end civilization, and that is not a new thought. But they declare confidently that the lineup will not be on nationalist lines but will be simply between Red and White, as it is today in Spain.

We left Spain over the frontier town of Ciudad Rodrigo and looked back as long as we could admire its perfectly preserved and semi-modernized city walls which make it a combination of mediaeval town and up-to-date fortress. Over the Portuguese border we flew into a green land clustered with vines and fruit trees.

2000 Die in Battle

Sailing on down until we hit the Tagus river and followed that stream to Lisbon, landing there in a scorching sun on a field choking with dust.

A Portuguese plane was about to take off for Tangier and amongst its passengers I met a friend who had just come out of Badajoz, the Spanish fortress town on the Portuguese border which the Whites took with the Foreign Legion after the bitterest fighting of the war. My friend said that an estimate of 2000 dead in the fighting and subsequent executions would be the minimum.

Bad news for me was the fact I had come to Portugal to discover that it is impossible now to telephone from Lisbon abroad because the line runs over Madrid. Furthermore any telegrams filed in Portugal are subject to the Portuguese censorship which is, if anything, more rigid than the Spanish one.

The Portuguese dictatorship is reputed to be benevolent, but not so towards the press which is kept under the strictest control. As a dictatorship the Lisbon government is naturally sympathetic towards the Spanish Whites and the Lisbon radio is as strong in tone as the White stations in Burgos or Seville.

Minus Neutrality

Gil Robles, one of the chief White leaders and head of the Catholic party, has his headquarters in Lisbon, where he supervises the gathering of funds from abroad for the White cause. Lisbon makes no pretense of neutrality in her sentiment and the bookstores have their windows full of White pamphlets and are decorated with the White colors, orange and gold.

There was no sense in staying in Lisbon at all after learning the hopelessness of the communications, but the Portuguese airdrome authorities refused to let us depart until the next day. Of 16 hours spent in Lisbon, five were spent negotiating with the police, airdrome and customs authorities, although our total baggage consisted of comb, brush, razor and toothbrush.

Lisbon's airport is the worst situated in the world, a full hour's drive from town through the most offensive suburbs of pig sties and garbage dumps. But the city itself, lying in a curve and built up the side of a hill, was glorious in the golden sunshine just before dusk.

We ate our only meal of the day, an early dinner, in a semi-roof garden on top of a modern building overlooking the town and watched a newspaper's electric sign spell out the inevitable news of one White victory after another.

Up before dawn, we got coffee from a thermos bottle and were at the airport by 6 o'clock, but the Portuguese kept us until eight with endless formalities. Over in the bay was anchored the German vessel Kamerun, which had been shot at and stopped by Madrid warship, an incident which led Germany to send a powerful part of her navy in the Mediterranean.

The sound of heavy guns firing came from the bay but the Portuguese said it was only the Portuguese navy target shooting.

We took off in a light breeze and headed for Seville. In a brief two hours we were there. As soon as the city came in sight we climbed down fast and from two miles away we flew at only a couple of hundred feet. This was to tell the most unobservant anti-aircraft gunner that we were going to land.

(The third installment of H. R. Knickerbocker's war log will appear in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.)

Germans Pilot Rebel War Planes, Writer Reveals

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—The New York Times, in a dispatch today from its correspondent at Caceres, Spain, reported that town had been "made into a gigantic air base filled with German aviators."

The fliers, the Times dispatch said, "go out mornings to bomb Madrid and its loyalist defenders," and "drive the loyalist planes that have hampered the insurgent advance from the skies."

The correspondent asserted he had seen ten large green German bombers and 17 pursuit planes hop for action from a big field built "almost overnight" by thousands of workers.

"Foreign airmen are literally winning for one side in the Spanish uprising," the dispatch declared.

400 KILLED IN RAID

It added the Fascists asserted 400 were killed in one airplane raid on Madrid.

The German airmen, the Times story said, make no pretense of wearing Spanish uniforms, because the field is carefully guarded. It added the fliers "clamber into their planes and take off openly."

"The mystery of Caceres," the writer declared, "has sent every American and French correspondent who has learned the answer to jail here or led to their being held and permitted to send only censored dispatches."

The power of the German air fleet with General Franco's insurgent army, the Times dispatch said, made possible the Fascists' success. Government forces "fought the flower of the insurgent army to a standstill outside Talavera until the German planes got into action two days ago," the Times report declared.

Pope Warns of Future's Sad Plight

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Sept. 15 (INS)—"The destiny of Europe and the whole of humanity has never before been in such darkness," Pope Pius told members of an international pilgrimage at the summer Vatican today.

"Never," he said, "have the counsels of men been so incapable, not only of preventing ills, but of stopping them."

Consul and 17 Americans Flee Spain; Rebels Gain

(Copyright, 1936, By the Associated Press)

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 15—Spanish Fascists renewed their campaign to subdue Socialists in northern Spain today with an advance toward the government lines at Oria, 10 miles west.

The first contingent of Fascist soldiers drove forward while others of the victorious insurgents hurried repairs to the war-damaged northern railroad in San Sebastian.

The object of the new military advance, Fascist commanders said, is Bilbao, approximately 50 miles westward along the northern coast.

Renewal of the offensive resulted in hasty evacuation of Bilbao by foreigners and abandonment of the United States consulate.

William E. Chapman, American consul, closed his headquarters on instructions from Washington and, with his wife and son, Vice-Consul Manuel J. Codoner, 15 American nationals and 24 foreigners, arrived at Saint Jean de Luz, France, aboard the United States destroyer Kane.

Constitution Day To Be Observed On Thursday

More than 500,000 Bay State school children will participate in special exercises to be held in their respective school houses in observance of Constitution Day—the 149th birthday of the Constitution of the United States—on Thursday.

The National Constitution Day Committee today announced that special programs and proclamations had been forwarded to the school committees of every city and town throughout the state to be used by school children on that day.

Archibald R. Giroux, chairman of National Constitution Day Committee, stated that he has already received replies from school committees announcing that patriotic exercises would be held in their districts.

Patrick J. Campbell, superintendent of Boston schools, today received from the committee material to be used by the Boston school department in observing the day.

Noted Speakers

Plans were also completed today for the patriotic meeting to be held in Faneuil Hall Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of the National Constitution Day Committee.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., of New York and former Governor of Massachusetts Joseph B. Ely, will be the principal speakers.

The meeting, which will be broadcast over a nationwide hookup of the National Broadcasting Company is scheduled to start promptly at 1:15 p. m., permitting downtown business men and workers to attend.

Representatives of more than 80 patriotic, civil and fraternal organizations in Greater Boston will attend the meeting which is entirely non-partisan.

Important Guests

Among the invited guests who will be seated on the speakers' platform include former Governor Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Archer D. Ives, president of the American War Mothers; Mrs. Henry A. Fiske, Daughters of 1812; Lieutenant C. A. Palmer of the Lexington Minute Men; Captain William H. Ellis, Ancient and Honorable Artillery; Gleason L. Archer, dean of Suffolk Law School; Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy under the Hoover administration; Mrs. Frances Slattery, former president of the League of Catholic Women; Monsignor Francis L. Phelan, chancellor of the archdiocese; Representative Thomas Dorgan, father of the Teachers' Oath Bill, and Frederic W. Cooke, secretary of state.

Officers of the National Constitution Day Committee include Archibald R. Giroux, chairman; Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, vice-chairman; Lieutenant Edwin Holden, vice-chairman; Francis Clay Hartley, executive secretary, and Jean C. Breslin, secretary.

Proclamation to Be Read On Constitution Day

Now more than at any other time in the history of our country, it behooves all true, loyal Americans to observe the one hundred forty-ninth anniversary of the adoption of our Constitution.

Let us gather together around our fireside or in public assembly on this day and ponder the evil forces now at work in an effort to tear asunder the nation as conceived by those 39 brave patriots who gave to us our Constitution; and, as loyalists who believe in the sacred trust imposed in us by the founding fathers, let us not forget that glorious preamble:

> "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

Let us not forget, either, in these dark days of social unrest and economic disturbance that if we would continue to enjoy the liberty, the freedom guaranteed us by our great Constitution, we must guard it with all our might lest it be undermined by evil influences and our independence destroyed.

> "The people never give up their liberties but under some delusion."

Among other tax suggestions occurs the radical suggestion that all properties owned by churches or other religious bodies, actually used for public worship, shall be taxed and assessed at their full value.

Some have suggested that the churches themselves should be taxed. Needless to say, no action will be taken in this matter, at least not until all other sources of taxation shall have been exhausted.

The religious can remember for their comfort, and the radicals who object to the churches owning a few hundred million dollars' worth of real estate, should remember with dread that churches are the property of the Lord, and that He could very easily dispose of the matter by striking dead everybody suggesting or even thinking that church property should be taxed.

ROOSEVELT, INSURANCE MEN HOLD MYSTERY PARLEY

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—Frederick H. Ecker, chairman of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York, said, after a conference with President Roosevelt today, the meeting dealt with the insurance business as a whole, and that there was "no political significance" involved.

Ecker was one of a group of nine insurance executives invited to the White House to report on their financial status today as compared with several years ago.

Explaining the purpose of the conference, Secretary Stephen T. Early said it was to find out the present status of insurance companies as compared with 1930, when President Roosevelt, as Governor of New York, started a series of business conferences which he has carried on since coming to Washington.

Early added the conference was to see what the Federal government could do in the way of helping insurance companies further to improve their situation.

He said the President sent out formal invitations to the conference upon his return from his drouth trip, and that it was only accidental that they followed the September 5 speech by Colonel Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, at Allentown, Pa., in which he declared insurance policies were not secure under the New Deal fiscal policies.

9 EXECUTIVES ATTEND

Those who met with the President were James Beha, superintendent of Insurance of New York State under Roosevelt as Governor; William Safford, president of Western & Southern Indemnity; Thomas A. Buckner, president New York Life Insurance Co.; Charles F. Williams, president of Western & Southern Life Insurance Company; Edmund E. Zacher, president of Travelers Insurance Company; Guy W. Cox, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company; Michael J. Cleary, president of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Chairman Frederick H. Ecker and Vice-President James D. Craig of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 15 (INS)—Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, continued his campaign tour to the Pacific Coast today after bitterly assailing the Roosevelt administration's fiscal policies in an address here last night.

Discarding most of a prepared speech, Colonel Knox repeated his claims that life insurance and savings accounts are imperiled by the administration's monetary policies.

Colonel Knox linked the President's invitation to life insurance company executives to meet with him at the White House today with his speech at Allentown, Pa., September 5, when he charged:

"The present administration has been for four years giving lip service to security and welfare and today no life insurance policy is secure, no savings account is safe."

Savings are imperiled, he said, "because the present spending policy leads straight to inflation."

"GOVERNMENT UNSOUND"

"It is not the insurance companies or the savings banks that are unsound. It is the administration of the American government that is unsound," he added.

Referring to the threat of a Pennsylvania official to bring suit because his speech at Allentown imputed instability to Pennsylvania banks, Colonel Knox declared:

"It refers solely to the value of money in which insurance is paid and savings are kept.

"No intelligent person could possibly construe it as referring to the solvency of any bank, insurance company or other private enterprise. It could only refer to the blind squandering and credit adulteration by the government.

"I am informed the President has called a meeting of life insurance officials to consider the state of the companies.

"It is high time the government should be worrying about this matter."

Will Protest Heard Here Today

A probate court fight was in prospect today over the will of Miss Helen S. Henry of Montclair avenue, Roslindale, who left all her estate, except $1000, to Superior Court Justice Joseph A. Sheehan.

A petition contesting the will was on file in Suffolk Probate Court with Mrs. Lettie Crafts Marin of San Mateo, Calif., as plaintiff.

STARS Weep for FRIEND

THALBERG DIES BELOVED

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Hollywood, Sept. 15 (US)—Hollywood has lost its greatest producer, and I have lost my greatest friend . . .

Irving Thalberg, who at 37 had achieved fame seldom won by men twice his age, passed away yesterday, with his adored wife, Norma Shearer, his mother and father, the William Thalbergs, and his sister, Sylvia Thalberg Weingarten, by his side.

Cameras everywhere will halt tomorrow, the day of the funeral.

Never in all Hollywood's hectic history has there been a shock equal to this blow. A week ago I had said au revoir to Irving and Norma who were leaving for Del Monte for a weekend.

They were gay and happy at the prospect of this holiday, for Irving had worked hard and Norma felt that this vacation would take him from the studio grind.

Little Irving, for the first time, was to accompany them and all was merriment and laughter.

Irving came home from his Del Monte vacation with a bad cold. No one thought it was serious—no one was alarmed, least of all Irving who made light of it and even went to the opening of "Everyman" which he had sponsored.

The slight cold rapidly developed into lobar pneumonia and at 10:15 o'clock yesterday morning he passed away, after only a few hours of unconsciousness.

Hollywood Sad

All Hollywood is sad, for Irving never in his life had been known to do a mean or shabby deed. Although he had risen to fame he never forgot the people who labored side by side with him.

Anita Loos, Bernie Hyman, Frances Marion, Zoe Akens, George Zukor, all adored him and would gladly have laid down their lives if he could have been spared. Their loss and grief is the sorrow of the entire motion picture industry. There was only one Irving Thalberg, and only one such genius in motion pictures.

There is so much to tell about Irving, who worked so hard at the studio and was so happy in the midst of his little family. He worshipped Norma, his wife, and was her greatest admirer.

Perfect Mate

The Thalbergs were so happy, so sweet in their home life. I have often dined with them and thought to myself that Norma was the perfect wife for this brilliant young man who did everything so well—not only picture making but bridge, ping pong and all the recreations he enjoyed.

If Irving had a weakness it was his little daughter, Katharine, born just a year ago last June. On his desk was a picture of the little girl who had his dark, beautiful eyes and smile.

Irving did so many fine things that no one outside his immediate family ever knew. His mother, Mrs. William Thalberg, has just returned from two months in the East. She had gone there to buy a farm for Irving's cousins, refugees from Germany, whom he felt he should protect from the anti-Semitic reaction which followed the Hitler regime.

Norma Devoted

He had been looking well and seemed in better health the last year. Two years ago his health had broken down and he and Norma went to Europe on a long vacation. Her devotion was marvelous. One of the greatest stars on the screen and today acclaimed as "The First Lady of the Screen," Norma forgot herself in her eagerness to help her husband find his way to health.

Irving gave the world some of its finest pictures—"Ben Hur," "The Big Parade," "Anna Christie," which brought Greta Garbo to her greatest fame, "The Merry Widow," "Min and Bill," which established Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery as stars, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and many other Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer successes.

Our loss is great but we can feel happy in having known a man of his character. Other producers may come and go but there will only be one Irving Thalberg.

Satan Rides Fog!

Holds Up Film Of 'Salem'

But Ol' California's Climate Comes Through O. K.

By PEGGY DOYLE
Boston American Staff Writer

Santa Cruz, Cal., Sept. 15—Fog hung over Salem Village early today, threatening to break up a pleasant bustling scene.

All the villagers are gathered for the raising of the new house they are giving to the minister, the Rev. Samuel Parris, a typical Puritan preacher, to whom witchcraft, hell and devils are as real as an aching tooth.

Adjoining the meeting-house which faces the Common can be seen the framework, sills and chimney of the house to be raised. The men have doffed their knee-length, fitted broadcloth coats although many of them are still wearing their tall buckled felt hats as they assist in pulling up the sides of the house.

A fire in the crude stone fireplace is burning nicely against the roasting of the wild turkeys and the young lambs which have been placed on one of the two long tables of rough boards on sawhorses. On a similar table are great round loaves of bread fresh from the oven, halves of golden squashes ready for the roasting, cakes, smoked hams and huge baskets of reddening apples.

1692 in Salem

Women are gathered about these tables unpacking hampers of food or hurrying across the Common heavy-laden with their culinary triumphs.

It is nine of the clock, coast time, September 11, 1936, in Santa Cruz actually, but to all of us on Paramount's "Maid of Salem" set it is a late fall day in 1692 in New England's isolated Salem Village, a tiny outpost of civilization set on the edge of the unknown.

The nip in the air, the darkling clouds, the hanging fog have made the heavy broadcloth tunicked coats and burdensome felt hats of the men and the cumbersome homespun dresses and worsted capes of the women more than acceptable.

Even the visiting firemen from Boston (thanks to the thoughtfulness of Sterling Holloway (Miles Corbin, an officious young Puritan to us) are snuggling in the warmth of Puritan cloaks.

Bill Tummel, assistant director, has been squinting up at the clouds for the past half-hour and is still hopeful that the sky will clear so the outdoor scene on the Common may be shot.

We outlanders from Massachusetts are skeptical although the chauffeur, who has heretofore been the soul of dependability, has assured us that the sun will be out at exactly 11 a. m.

Dog in Picture

Well, folks, believe it or not, but you never saw a more gloriously sunny day on Boston Common than the one that dawned on Salem Village Common at EXACTLY 11 a. m.

"That's California weather for you—you can always tie to it," the chauffeur told us on the way home, and not too boastfully.

"We'll rehearse for the house-raising shot," megaphones Tummel, briskly. "You men with your hammers, start hammering. Children, here, on the Common. Where's Duke? And the other dogs? The women are to cross the Common slowly. Get Beulah Bondi, Kathryn Cheldon, Louise Dresser, Gale Sondergaard (Mrs. Abigail Goode, Mrs. Deborah Cheeves, Ellen Clark, Mrs. Martha Harding in the casting, respectively). You men at the cider barrels, drink as if you enjoyed it. Get Bilge (Boston's own E. E. Clive)—he's in this shot."

A stray black dog that has attached himself to the entire cast and technical staff poaches on the Common. You never saw a pooch so frolicsome. He's enjoying himself so genuinely that Tummel says:

"Let him stay. He's probably always wanted to be in pictures."

Across the Common the villagers hammer away industriously.

At the nearby cider-barrels several men, allegedly hot from their labors, are about to take a drink from the barrel.

Bilge, his black felt Puritan hat pushed back to reveal a beezer crimsoned by the past few days' broiling sun, is raising a drink to his lips. The men push him aside. Lurching drunkenly, he whines:

"'Tis dry work a-raising. Me throat is like a parched field."

"Small work you've done this day," one of the men retort. "Have you lifted a hand?"

Says the other man:

HARVEY STEPHENS LUCY BEAUMONT

Talking things over on "Maid of Salem" set are Harvey Stephens and Lucy Beaumont. Stephens plays the part of John Harding, the village doctor and apothecary. Miss Beaumont appears as Rebecca, a nurse. She is hanged for witchcraft. This Paramount feature is now being made at Santa Cruz, California.

"That he has—many times—with a tankard in it."

As the men laugh, Bilge, the town drunkard, a likeable, amusing ne'er-do-well, looks hurt, sulky and good-humored at the same time.

Just then Director Frank Lloyd, who is tops with his cast and working staff from Claudette Colbert to his newest "find," the black pooch, arrives with a wave and a "How be yah, neighbors?" for all.

They start all over again.

Lloyd suggests a little less music and a little more power behind the hammer, and then there is a racket from the direction of the new house.

The children are urged to be themselves—to shout with glee, to shrill with childish annoyance, to frolic a touch more boisterously.

The men whose job it is to set up in place the side of the house are told to ad lib among themselves and be more the merry villagers justly pleased at finishing a good job and noisily vocal about the prospect of the good feast just ahead.

It was thrilling to see the instant response—and then one m. v., with a mighty thump of his hammer as the last nail was being put into the side-wall construction, shouted,

"Atta BO-O-O-O-OY!!!!"

"Now, now," chided Director Lloyd, "I didn't ask you to forget you're a seventeenth century Puritan, even though I asked you to work like a red-blooded toiler spoiling for a feast. All right, again."

Clive Coming

This time everything proceeded without hitch and the order to shoot was given.

Next, the slightly unsteady Bilge (the former beloved director of the gifted Copley Players of the Copley Theater some five or six years ago, you'll remember) is rehearsing for his slightly uncertain pulling of the hairs from the dog's tail.

It was a notion of those days that hairs from a dog's tail warded off evil spirits. Now several days before, Bilge, in jittering terror, had rushed up to the meeting-house and, in the presence of the Rev. Mr. Parris, Elder Goode and others, had sworn to seeing "the Devil's own person in the forest yonder."

Clive, whose talent for making of any character part a gem, is an inspired Bilge—and a dyed-in-the-wool Bostonian.

"How's Boston?" "How's Joe DiPesa?" were the first two of the countless questions he put to the visitors from Bean-Town when first we met on the set.

"Boston is in my bones," he said, adding, a little sadly, "I never thought I'd go away from Boston."

But guess what?

He's to be guest of honor at the Boston world premiere of Paramount's "Maid of Salem," scheduled for Thanksgiving night, and if not then, on Christmas night.

(Another story from the movie colony in tomorrow's Boston's Evening American.)

IDENTIFY Drowned GIRL

BISHOP PLANS DEATH PROBE

After a veil of mystery had hung for two days, the body of the pretty, red-haired young woman found floating Sunday off Magazine Beach, Cambridge, was identified today as that of Mrs. Irene Steadstone, 27, of Norfolk street, Cambridge.

Identification was made by her husband, who told police he had been estranged from his wife for some time and that she had been lodging in the Norfolk street house.

Steadstone's identification ended the search Lieutenant William Kulray and Inspector Frank Philbrick of the Metropolitan police had been making for relatives or friends since Sunday.

Steadstone, who lives in Park street, Somerville, said he had thought from the description he read in the newspapers that the victim might be his wife.

At the Cambridge address police talked with William J. Porter, 22. They say they took from him the following statement:

"About 8:15 last Saturday night, Irene asked me if I would take her down to Magazine Beach for a swim. I said yes.

Hunted for Her

"I took my girl and Irene. She had put on her bathing suit and a white bathing cap.

"We all got into the machine and I drove to the beach. She got out and walked down toward a short way and then somebody started the motor of their car.

"She came back and said, 'Don't you want to wait?' Go ahead if you want to.' I said, 'No, go ahead and take a swim.'

"My girl and I sat in the car for about an hour. We thought it funny that Irene didn't come back.

"Finally, both my girl and I walked around the beach looking for her and went to all the buildings there and went to the Riverside Boat Club.

"My girl went into the ladies' room there and I got a flashlight and we took another search around on the grounds near the beach, because we thought she mighthave met somebody.

"We were quite worried and I guess we might have got panicky. We went home and got my brother John and he came down and we made another serach. We finally concluded that perhaps she had met somebody. We thought she might have met her husband and gone away with him.

"We didn't want to tell the police because we thought it might create some trouble. I didn't associate the girl yesterday with Irene when I read about it."

Bishop To Probe

Porter said the dead girl's maiden name was Irene Clark and that her mother and father live in Rockledge street, Roxbury.

At the beach, where she had done considerable swimming during the past summer, the girl was known only as Irene, and that only to a few casual acquaintances she had made.

While police were announcing the identification, it was learned that District Attorney Warren L. Bishop planned an investigation.

At his home, the district attorney said the matter had not been brought to his attention officially as yet, but that he planned today to assign State Detectives Edward Sherlock and Edward O'Neil to investigate.

Medical Examiner David C. Dow announced this afternoon, however, that his verdict would be the bathing beauty was a victim of accidental drowning.

She's Supervising Firemen

Two alarms brought much of Boston's fire fighting equipment to the scene of an apartment house on Commonwealth avenue and Allston street today. Mrs. Mary Sheehan, 1930 Commonwealth avenue, is supervising the fire fighters.

50 Routed by Fire In 5-Story Allston Apartment

More than 50 persons were driven from their homes today by a $6000 fire in a 5-story apartment building at Commonwealth avenue and Allston street, Allston.

The fire broke out in the kitchen of a second floor apartment occupied by B. L. Gibbin.

Among those who fled the fire were Miss Edythe Johnson, Miss Bernice Parker, Miss Nelly Flye, Miss Mary Leslie, Mrs. Ida Bennett, Mrs. A. L. Hallenback, Mrs. Mary Sheehan, Dennis F. Sheehan, Major F. E. Parker, G. L. Saville, M. J. Johnson, C. E. Benham, W. C. Gibson, G. E. Lillibridge, E. J. Burke, F. W. Burke and David Finkelstein.

CHINESE FIGHT TOKYO INVADERS

Shanghai, Sept. 15 (AP)—Japanese sailors, who sought to force landing at Pakhoi of Tokyo investigators into the death of a Japanese national, were reported today to have clashed with Chinese soldiers.

The newspaper Hingpao declared in a dispatch from Canton the Japanese sailors met opposition from remnants of the old 19th route Chinese army which fought Japanese forces at Shanghai in 1932.

SEES 'SEA OF BLOOD'

Hitler Warns Bolsheviks

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 15 (AP)—The spread of Bolshevism in Europe, Adolf Hitler believes, will plunge the continent into a "sea of blood."

"I watch with fearful anxiety the developments in Europe," the German chancellor declared in the closing speech of the annual National Socialist convention last night.

"I have seen this danger clearly but I do not belong to those who faint at the sight of it," the Fuehrer told thousands of applauding Nazis.

"We are entering a great period of history—a period in which not the wiseacres but the brave will come out on top.

"We must be ready for every sacrifice God demands of us. We must have that which is most indispensable of all raw materials—the ore of the iron heart."

Hitler accepted the name the Russian press gave to him after his caustic criticism of Jewry and Bolshevism, saying:

"They call me a wild man. All right. As a wild man I am a better European."

DEERY PAROLED DAY AHEAD

John A. Deery, jailed Salem banker, was paroled today, a day ahead of schedule, because of the serious illness of his brother, Edward.

Supplies For Ocean Fliers

EDDIE RICKENBACKER JOE KELLEY GEORGE BRANSON

Eddie Rickenbacker, famed World War flier, stopped in Boston, with Joe Kelley, co-pilot, and George Branson, pilot, en route to aid Harry Richman and his pilot, Dick Merrill, who were forced down in Musgrave Harbor, Newfoundland. They carried plane parts and gasoline. This picture was made at the Shobe Airline hangar at the East Boston airport.

Rickenbacker Off to Bring Richman Out of Wilds

over water and 260 miles overland to St. John's, capital of Newfoundland. He hopped from Sydney at 8:23 standard time.

Some doubt was expressed that, reaching Harbor Grace at the time he expected, he could make the flight to Musgrave Harbor today. The weather was heavily overcast but visibility was fair.

Little attention has been given the runways at Harbor Grace field for the past year but pilots thought the rescue ship would encounter no trouble landing there.

The rescuers faced difficulties which may keep Richman and Merrill in the isolated Newfoundland country for several days.

CATCH UP ON SLEEP

The sauve night club entertainer and his crack pilot caught up with sleep last night at the home of T. W. Abbott, a merchant, a short distance from the bog in which they landed their $95,000 Lady Peace yesterday, 15 hours and 17 minutes after hopping from Southport, England, for New York.

There is no telephone line, no railroad within 50 miles of Musgrave Harbor, and apparently no radio capable of sending out news to the outside world.

Over the single telegraph line, handled by a girl operator and clogged with inquiries concerning the forced landing, came a message from Richman, characteristic of the Broadway songster-playboy:

"Our plane sank into that bog like it was a feather bed, it seemed to me, and boy, it felt good! It sure is soft stuff!"

PLANE IS DAMAGED

Neither Richman nor Merrill was hurt beyond shaking up and bruises but the propellor of their plane was shattered and one wing damaged.

They could hardly have chosen a more inaccessible place on the Atlantic coast on which to bring the Lady Peace to earth. But with their fuel used up bucking head winds, rain and sleet, they had no choice.

Musgrave Harbor, tiny fishing settlement on the outskirts of civilization, is 500 miles beyond the spot where Beryl Markham, English solo flier, brought her own ship to earth in a similar crackup 10 days ago.

MAY DISMANTLE PLANE

There is no landing field and only a small plane may land on the beach. The fact that Merrill chose the bog instead of the beach indicated that the big rescue ship would be unable to get in.

The only regular means of tranportation between Harbor Grace and Musgrave Island is a small boat.

Pilots familiar with the territory said the Lady Peace, even though repaired, may have to be dismantled if it it to be salvaged.

The rescue expedition arrived in Boston after one brief stop at Hartford, Ct., en route from Newark, N. J., for the purpose of picking up a propellor for the trans-Atlantic ship.

Captain Rickenbacker said he expected it would be necessary to change at Harbor Grace to a small plane which could land on the beach at Musgrave Harbor.

No seaplanes were believed available. One small plane that took off from Harbor Grace in an effort to reach the scene was forced back by a storm.

SMALL INJURIES

None-too-favorable weather conditions along the rugged Newfoundland coast awaited Rickenbacker and his rescue party, including Pilot George Brandon, Co-Pilot Joseph Kelley and Mechanics John McPhail, Jesse Neuenhaus and Earl Powell.

Rickenbacker's big Eastern Airways cabin plane, when it took off here at 4:15 a. m. was loaded almost to capacity, with seats ripped out to make room for four steel drums containing 200 gallons of gasoline.

ROMANCE CAPTAIN, PILOT PHYSICAL TEST ORDERED

Stores before two Washington inspectors to tell his story of "what happened."

He declared that to his knowledge the names of the persons rescued by the New oYrk were not taken. He testified:

"I regret that a message containing the names of the persons saved was not sent from the New York and delivered to the anxious people waiting at the pier."

OFFICERS FACE TEST

Prior to the opening of today's hearing, Captain Oscar G. Haines, local supervising inspector, startled witnesses and spectators when he announced that Captain Delbert C. Wickens and Pilot Alton C. Brown of the Romance would have to undergo a physical examination.

They were ordered to be examined by a public health official as to their "hearing, eyesight and physical reactions."

In their testimony yesterday Captain Wickens and Brown disagreed as to the number of passengers aboard the Romance when it left Provincetown.

Their conflicting testimony indicated that six persons might still be missing as a result of the crash.

After hearing Capt. Oscar G. Haines, local supervising inspector, read the order, both Captain Wickens and Brown, who were seated together, immediately left the hearing room. Captain Haines said the decision ordering the health examination had been reached by the two Washington inspectors, Capt. William W. Storey, John F. Oetil and himself.

SURPRISE MOVE

In a surprise move the inquiry board recalled members of the Romance crew today. It had been expected that the crew of the New York would open the second day's hearing.

During today's questioning of witnesses, it was revealed that the radio operator of the sunken Romance had been discharged two days before the collision with the S. S. New York.

This was testified by John F. Wells of West Medford, purser aboard the Romance, in answer to a question put him by A. J. Santry, counsel for the Eastern Steamship Co., owner of the S. S. New York.

Wells further corroborated Captain Wickens' previous testimony that there were 208 passengers aboard. Wells, who said he had been with the Romance for two years, testified he had checked the number of tickets.

Four other members of the Romance crew, recalled to the stand, were questioned very briefly.

Clifton McDonald, second engineer, reiterated his yesterday's statement that he received the signal to stop while proceeding at full speed just prior to the crash.

Captain Edgar Robinson, mate, again testified that the log book of the Romance had been lost in the crash. Joseph Martinez, chief engineer, was also requestioned for a few minutes.

Charles T. Rowley, another member of the Romance crew, took the stand for the first time today. He said he held an able-bodied seaman's license and a lifeboat license and had been at sea for eight years.

He testified that after he had informed Captain Wickens that everybody was safely off the Romance following the collision, the captain then made a personal tour of inspection on the rapidly-sinking vessel.

Engineer's Reply Upsets Court Calm

The seriousness of the inquiry into the collision of the S. S. Romance and S. S. New York before Washington inspectors was broken for a few minutes today.

It occurred during the testimony of Joseph Martinez, chief engineer of the ill-fated Romance, who was recalled to the stand.

The first question shot at Martinez by Captain Oscar G. Haines, local supervising inspector, was:

"Were you ever before a trial board before?"

"Yes," came the reply to the surprise of spectators and steamboat officials who had heard him say yesterday that he had not.

"When?" came the next question from Captain Hanes.

"Yesterday," answered Martinez, as the jammed courtroom burst into laughter for several minutes.

HUGE MAJORITIES SWEEP IN REPUBLICAN NOMINEES

complete proof of the return of former pro-Brann Republicans to the G. O. P. fold as well as the desertions of a large number of the old-line Democrats.

In each case, the Republican congressional nominee left their New Deal rivals trailing in the dust by piling up pluralities of more than 17,000.

BREWSTER POPULAR

In the Third District, Congressman Ralph P. Brewster, Republican, gained a great re-election victory by leading Wallace F. Mabee, Democratic candidate, by nearly 20,000 votes.

Politically significant here was the fact that this great majority was scored in the very district visited by President Roosevelt last July when he toured the "Quoddy" area.

In the second district, Clyde H. Smith of Skowhegan badly defeated the New Deal nominee, Ernest L. McLean, and left the two independent candidates not even in the running.

Rev. J. Clarence Lankamby, independent, polled little more than 7000, with A. Raymond Rogers, Union for Social Justice candidate, trailing with hardly 2500.

In the first district, James C. Oliver of South Portland, making his debut to the political area, defeated the present incumbent Congressman Simon M. Hamlin, Democrat, also of South Portland, by more than 17,000.

The clean Congressional sweep by the Republicans ended the four-year domination of the Maine delegation by the Democrats.

The only other independent candidate in the field, Benjamin Buber, independent candidate for governor, garnered only a handful of votes.

PAINTS WAY

Jubilant over the results, Arthur E. Sewall, chairman of the Republican state committee declared today that "Maine had paved the way for a great Republican landslide throughout the nation."

"Maine has pointed the way to the rest of the nation for a great Republican victory parade," declared Sewall.

"A nation joins with the Pine Tree State in celebrating this historic event in American political life.

"The vote cast here yesterday proves conclusively that the people of this country, aroused to the dangerous doctrines of the New Deal, are determined that new leadership will prevail during the next four years.

"We in Maine are proud that we were able to be in the front line of this great battle for the restoration of American principles in government.

POINT TO TRADITION

"We are proud to point to the honored tradition:

"'As goes Maine, so goes the nation.'

"As a result of Governor Landon's militant visit to Portland an entire country realizes today that the Republican nominee for President has the confidence and support of the American people.

"Never before in political history has the outcome of a Maine state election had such a profound effect on the country at large.

"The Republican victory here is the first great surge in a nation-wide landslide that will crush the Roosevelt administration at the polls in November.

"I want to take this occasion to thank the hundreds of state, county, city and town Republican workers who have given their time and energy during the intensive campaign in the interests of the American system of government.

OUTSIDE ELEMENTS

The straight Republican victory at the polls came as the climax to the most intensive and hotly contested campaign Maine has experienced since the turn of the century.

From the very outset it was apparent there was an overwhelming sentiment in Maine against the New Deal.

This opposition was solidified into a great voting strength by the militant campaign of the Republican candidates and workers, headed by White and Sewall.

The "surprise visit" of Governor Landon to Portland and his important speech there gave the final impetus to the momentum the campaign had gathered.

Throughout the summer there were many outside elements such as Townsendites and Union Party endorsements which kept political observers guessing.

Maine G. O. P. Sweep Points The Way, Says Martin

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Eastern Republican campaign manager, said today, "Maine points the way over which a majority of the states will follow on November 3."

Commenting on the Republican victory in the Maine election, in a statement sent to Republican headquarters from his Massachusetts home, Martin said:

"Maine has repudiated the New Deal. When the governorship which has been controlled for four years and two seats in Congress are lost, it is unquestionably a major setback.

"Even the popular Governor Brann was unable to stand up under the anti-New Deal deluge despite his persistent efforts to shake off its weight.

"The tremendous vote given the Republican candidates for Congress is the best indication of the real sentiment against the New Deal.

"Governor Landon delivered the knockout blow when he personally visited the state last Saturday.

"He showed that perhaps more than anyone else he understands the temper of the American people. He knows what they are thinking about.

"The Maine results will hearten Republicans and anti-New Dealers throughout the nation and will cause them to press forward with new zeal and effort toward the November election."

"Not Much to Brag On," Says Farley

New York, Sept. 15 (AP)—Commenting on the Maine election, Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley said today:

"Republican Maine remains Republican in a local election by a reduced majority.

"A Republican senator retains his seat by a margin so small that it may take a recount to determine the actual vote.

"Perhaps a better way of stating the situation would be to state that Maine continues Republican by a majority of 50,000 du Pont-Morgan dollars.

"Whatever congratulations are exchanged among the Liberty Leaguers and the titular head of the minority party will be quite all right with us—but it does not seem like very much to brag on."

Nation Watches 5 States' Voting

By Associated Press

Studying the Republican victory in Maine, the national prepared today for the usual "post mortem"—the furious argument that breaks out every four years as to how far the Pine Tree State result can be considered a "weather vane" of nation-wide presidential sentiment.

Meantime five states—Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Wisconsin and Michigan were conducting primaries.

Some leading features of today's voting outside Massachusetts follow:

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Attention centered on the race for the Republican senatorial nomination between Governor H. Styles Bridges and George H. Moses, former senator.

MICHIGAN—Senator Couzens, pro-Roosevelt Republican, sought renomination aginst former Governor Brucker. Battling for Democratic gubernatorial nomination were Frank Murphy, Philippine commissioner, and George W. Welsh.

WISCONSIN—Unopposed for the Progressive renomination, Governor Philip La Follette was target of campaign attacks by those seeking Democratic and Republican nominations. A number of congressional aspirants had Townsend or Coughlin indorsement.

NEW YORK—Voters cast ballots for aspirants to state's 45 seats in National House of Representatives. Townsend and Union party supporters were among those seeking nominations.

Brann Suffered First Setback

Portland, Me., Sept. 15 (AP)—Governor Louis J. Brann's rise in the favor of Maine's electorate and his fall before the Republican sweep in yesterday's election is best indicated by the vote in his three contests for major state office.

His setback yesterday by U. S. Senator Wallace H. White, Jr. (R), whose seat he sought, was the only one suffered in three campaigns.

In 1932, Brann defeated Burleigh Martin (R), 121,158 to 118,800 for governor. In 1934 he increased his margin of victory to 23,000 as he turned back Alfred K. Ames (R), by a 156,917 to 133,414 vote. White's majority yesterday was approximately 5000 as he topped Brann 157,340 to 152,412 in virtually complete returns.

Weeks Hails Maine Sweep As Death Blow to 'Deal'

Maine's smashing Republican victory was hailed today by Chairman Sinclair Weeks of the Massachusetts state committee as the death knell of the "sorry experimenting in government" of the Roosevelt administration.

"Maine has spoken," Chairman Weeks declared. "The New Deal majority of 1934 not only has been washed out, but a record Republican majority is the net result. On the basis of the figures, Maine should go for Governor Landon in November by 75,000.

"The result proves conclusively that the votes of the people cannot be bought.

"The ground swell for a return to sane government has swept over Maine. It will continue over Massachusetts and the other New England states as has been so definitely forecast by the several straw polls.

"I am confident that the rest of the country, aroused by the response on the Atlantic seaboard to the appeal of Governor Landon for a return to the American method of government, will, like the shot heard 'round the world in the cause of liberty, prove the death of this sorry experimenting in government which has been a nightmare tormenting thinking Americans during the past four years."

Recount for Brann Urged by Curley

"If the vote is as close as the reports would indicate, I believe Governor Brann should ask for a recount," declared Curley today, commenting on the defeat of Governor Brann in the Maine election yesterday.

"I feel sure that if a recount is held, it will establish that Governor Brann won," the Governor stated.

REPUBLICANS LAY BURRELL 'ERROR' TO TRICKERY

of Silver street, who said he was buying a newspaper, was also slugged into unconsciousness. Salvatore Sciddetta, 23, of Wiggins street, North End, was arrested and charged with assault and battery in this affray.

Then it was disclosed, a few minutes after the polls opened, that faulty Republican ballots carried the designation "State Treasurer" after the name of former State Treasurer Burrell, who is seeking to return to that office.

WEEKS CHARGES PLOT

This provoked an outburst of protests, but the Secretary of State's office said the error would make no difference inasmuch as the State Ballot Law Commission had approved the ballot a week ago.

Sinclair Weeks, chairman of the Republican state comittee immediately issued a statement intimating that the Democrats might have had a finger in the pie. He said:

"Apparently with the permission of the State Ballot Law Commission, of which Charles H. McGlue is chairman, Fred Burrell has advertised himself as state treasurer.

"He is not state treasurer, nor has he been since he resigned that office in 1920, when Calvin Coolidge was governor of this state.

"Burrell now holds a state appointment given him by Governor Curley. I hope Republicans will not be misled, but will vote for that fine citizen who was chosen by the Republican convention for state treasurer—William E. Hurley, former postmaster of Boston."

WARNING TO VOTERS

It is stated further that voters would be "warned" to this effect in radio broadcasts throughout the day and evening until the polls closed.

Acting Police Superintendent Fallon ordered the broadcast to all police cruising cars to "bring in all ward heelers" after a flood of complaints from persons casting their ballots.

He said there were many complaints from all over Boston that persons with candidates' cards were actually blocking entrances to polling stations until they had delivered their pleas.

It was in the larger cities that the light early vote was recorded and election officials put that down to the threatening weather in the forenoon.

RUSH DUE LATER

In the towns, however, rainy intervals didn't dampen the spirits of the voters. The real rush, however, is scheduled for the evening hours, just before closing time, and extra precautions are being taken to avoid trouble.

Voters of both majority parties were choosing their respective state tickets, nominating candidates for U. S. Senator, for Congress in 15 districts, for governor's council, State Senate, House and county and court posts.

Following charges of illegal registration, made by Republican leaders, in some of the Boston wards, a large corps of G. O. P. watchers were on duty in many of the election precincts ready to challenge "repeater" suspects.

Last minute rallies, parades, red fire, and a barrage of radio appeals brought the various primary campaigns to a close but all was overshadowed by the pivotal election in Maine and the New England tour of Governor Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate.

3-CORNERED FIGHT

The spotlight of today's balloting is on the three-cornered contest between Governor Curley, Mayor Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg and former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien for the Democratic nomination for United States senator.

Greenwood, son-in-law of Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, whose seat is the goal, will run as an independent later in the November election, in the event that a protest against his independent papers is not sustained by the state ballot law commission.

Former Dist. Atty. O'Brien is a sticker candidate for the senatorship with the backing of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, and has dual papers for the senatorship and for the vice-presidency on the union party ticket in the November election.

O'Brien became a sticker candidate in today's primary in retaliation against the Democratic state committee for filing a protest against his November 3 independent candidacies with the state ballot law commission.

Today's senatorial test is deciding two things, namely, the strength of the anti-Curley forces within the Democratic party, and weight of the Union Party lineup.

LODGE BOOSTED

Today's Republican primary is being watched particularly on the outcome of the voter's choice for the nominations for state treasurer and for United States senator.

Representative Henry Cabot Lodge of Beverly is opposed by former State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook of Boston and by Guy M. Gray of Springfield. William E. Hurley, former postmaster of Boston, is opposed by Asst. Dist. Atty. William G. Andrew of Cambridge and former State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell of Medford.

Chairman Sinclair Weeks of the Republican State Committee has made a special appeal to the Republican city and town committeemen all over the state to see to it that Lodge and Hurley, the convention nominees, are overwhelmingly endorsed by the party voters.

A defeat for Hurley, especially, would be considered as a bad break for the Republican party, giving the Democrats the chance of capitalizing such a result as from an unliberal point of view.

Attention is being also directed in today's voting to the outcome of the hectic contest for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant-governor between Philip J. Philbin of Clinton, Thomas F. Galvin of Lawrence and former City Councillor Francis E. Kelly of Boston. Philbin was endorsed by the Democratic convention when it was thought that Commissioner of Correction Arthur Lyman would have that field to himself. After the nomination, Galvin, a strong campaigner, and Kelly, who has in other years waged an aggressive battle for the office, entered the fray.

HURLEY UNOPPOSED

Charles F. Hurley of Cambridge is unopposed in today's primary for the nomination for governor. The same is true of John W. Haigis of Greenfield for the Republican nomination for governor. Both were endorsed in the pre-primary conventions.

Other major contests which the party voters are settling today in the battle for the Republican nomination for state auditor, between Russell A. Wood of Cambridge and Richard Darby of Medford, and the contest between former Civil Service Commissioner James M. Hurley of Marlboro and Senator James C. Scanlan of Somerville for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer.

Attorney General Paul A. Dever is unopposed for the Democratic nomination for his present office. Judge Felix Forte of Somerville is unopposed for the Republican nomination for attorney general.

Dr. Joseph Santosuosso of Boston, in the Democratic primary for secretary of state, and Thomas H. Buckley of Abington for renomination for state auditor, while opposed, are expected to win easily.

EXPECT RECORD VOTE

In Worcester a new record primary vote was expected with the vote possibly going more than 50,000. This was indicated when figures showed that 83,665 persons were listed as registered voters, setting a new high for that city.

The main interest in Worcester is the vote cast for the two candidates for Congress who are running solely on the support of the Union for Social Justice. They are John F. Harrigan, a Republican, and C. Winthrop Small, a Democrat, who are opposing the present congressman, Pehr G. Holmes, Republican, seeking re-election.

Every Republican congressman has opposition but are expected to be renominated by the party voters today. In the Sixth district, the Republican voters are choosing between six candidates. The late Congressman A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester was the former congressman in the district. Of the six, Mayor George Bates of Salem and Rept. Malcolm Bell of Marlboro appear to be running strongest.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 15 (AP)—To Governor H. Styles Bridges, candidate for Republican nomination for U. S. Senate, went the one Republican vote cast in Livermore, first New Hampshire town to report in today's primary.

He also received the single Republican vote cast two years ago when seeking the gubernatorial nomination. Former U. S. Senator George H. Moses is opposing Bridges.

State Senator Eliot A. Carter of Nashua received the lone vote for Republican nomination for governor today.

Democratic candidates for senatorial and gubernatorial nomination, who are unopposed, each received four votes.

Woman, 72, Beaten; Suspect Seized

After a chase through South End streets and a battle down a flight of stairs a South Boston man was taken into custody by police today for questioning in connection with the beating and attempted robbery of a 72-year-old woman.

The victim, Mrs. Anna Azrin, proprietor of a small grocery store in Harrison avenue, claimed that a man came into her store to use her telephone. He asked for change, she said, and when she opened the cash drawer, he hit her with a scale weight.

Her screams attracted her son, Harry Azrin, and the assailant fled. Patrolmen James F. Wilson and Francis Donovan, is a cruiser car, raced in pursuit.

At an East Dedham street house Wilson jumped out of the car and captured a man who gave the name of Dominic Grandy of Dorchester street, South Boston.

Wilson said the man fought as they were coming down a stairway and they both rolled half a flight.

According to police Grandy told them:

"I don't know why I did it. I must have been crazy, I guess."

Traffic Warrant Out for Student

An order for the arrest of Porter Sargent, Jr., of Weybridge road, Brookline, son of a former Harvard professor, was issued by Judge Arthur P. Stone in East Cambridge court today when the youth failed to appear in answer to a summons charging him with an automobile traffic violation.

Judge Stone was told that a telephone communication to the court from a member of Sargent's family reported him to be attending classes at Black Mountain College, North Carolina, and that he would not return home until the Christmas holidays.

Judge Stone issued an order for the student's arrest.

According to the Belmont police, Sargent's machine failed to stop at an intersection August 16. A summons to appear in court was left at the Sargent home after the student had appeared at the station house, police said.

GOV. LANDON JUBILANT AT MAINE VOTE

Chicago, Sept. 15 (INS)—Less than an hour after his arrival here en route home from his stirring campaign in the East, Gov. Alfred M. Landon left today on the "Sunflower Special" for Topeka, Kan.

Republican chiefs greeted him during the brief stopover.

Jubilant over the outcome in Maine where he made a fighting speech on the eve of the election, Landon said the Republican victory proves "the people of the country are aroused to their danger and determined to preserve their system of government and of life."

Landon sent this telegram of congratulation to Arthur E. Sewell, Maine G. O. P. chairman:

"Please extend to the successful Republican candidates for all offices in your election yesterday my heartiest congratulations on their significant victories in Maine. Their election was something more than a mere partisan success.

"Maine has proved that the people of this country are aroused to their danger and determined to preserve their system of government and of life. The people of Maine have sounded a call that will find an immediate response throughout the nation.

"ALFRED M. LANDON."

Nation-Wide Poll

Cite Cross-Section Of 'Political Mind'

By ARCHIBALD M. CROSSLEY
Director of the National Barometer

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

New York, Sept. 15—Many and varied are the reasons given by voters in telling the investigators of the National Barometer, the Crossley Poll, what caused them to make up their minds to vote for Landon, or to vote for Roosevelt.

Underlying reasoning, thus stated, gives a vivid cross-section of the American political mind, year 1936.

As the voters ponder the qualifications of candidates for the Presidency, their thoughts are highlighted for readers of the National Barometer. Although it is too early to cite certain points as the most important reasons for voters' decisions, some recur again and again until they roll up impressive totals.

For example, the belief that the New Deal has spent too much money, and too much of it unwisely—that opinion comes from every point in the political compass, and is being threshed out thoroughly in commentators' columns these days throughout the land.

Other thoughts of the average voter are not so well publicized:

From a farmer in Indiana—I am for Landon. It's time we had a change.

From Missouri—Roosevelt. He saved my home.

From New York—Roosevelt has been for the laboring class, and I am a laborer.

From Minnesota—There is too much government in business. Landon.

From Ohio—The New Deal has tried to stifle private initiative. Landon.

In thousands of returns, the issue is defined as being for, or against, Roosevelt and the New Deal. Landon has his fervent supporters, but also is in the minds of a great many voters who find in him the alternative to an administration they decline to support.

Among the Landon votes tabulated by the National Barometer, for instance, may be found these sentiments, all given as main reasons for determination to vote Republican on November 3:

We must have lower taxes.

I am against wasteful spending.

United States currency should be stabilized.

The coming generations deserve a break.

I disapprove of the whole New Deal.

The Supreme Court showed the way.

On the other side, the supporters of President Roosevelt spring to his defense, list many a reason for their intention to vote for his reelection:

He has done all anyone could.
Farm prices are rising.
Bank failures stopped.
He is against Wall Street.
The farm program is intelligent and workable.

Thus it goes. Now and then, in the replies from the rank and file who will elect a President two months hence, surprises are found. Perhaps the most notable to date, in the National Barometer's files, is this succinct statement from a small-town business man in the Middle-West, who will vote for Roosevelt:

"I am for him strong. He stopped kidnaping."

Twin Voting, Not Repeating

It looked as though it might be serious, but then a good laugh was had by all.

Mrs. Felice Klang of 27 Washington street, Dorchester, appeared at the Jeremiah E. Burke School to cast her ballot in the primary elections today and was summarily stopped by voting inspectors.

"Didn't you vote ten minutes ago?" they asked her.

"Why, I never voted before in my life," she indignantly answered.

And then it developed that Mrs. Klang had followed her twin sister, Mrs. Amelia Solomon of 67 Washington street, Dorchester, to the polls and looked so much like her that her identity was mistaken.

Voting officials admitted the joke was on them.

Steeplechase Classic Holds Interest Of Society's Smart Set

By BETTY ALDEN

WITH THE APPROACH of Indian summer comes the hunting moon . . . which, to the aborigine meant the month of hunting and laying in a supply of game for the coming winter . . . but to the sportsman means a month of exhilarating early morning rides behind a pack of hounds, across fields nipped by the first touches of autumn frost . . .

JESSIE FAY

The revival of interest in hunting each fall, brings with it an equal revival of interest in hunt club horse shows and steeplechasing . . . Last Saturday, the blooded hunters of the foremost stables in the country ran in the Rockaway Steeplechase Association's races . . . and on Saturday, September 26, they will gather on the Long Island estate of Mr. and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark for the running of the Meadowbrook Steeplechase, which is the high point of the steeplechasing season in this country and is comparable to the Grand National at Aintree . . .

But, before the 'chasers go out to Long Island, the interest of the hunting world will be centered upon a race which is fast becoming a rival to the Meadowbrook in importance . . . the Foxcatcher National Cup Steeplechase, which will be run next Saturday afternoon in Fair Hill, Maryland . . .

Though this race is only three years old, having been first run in 1934, it already occupies a most prominent place in the minds of leading sportsmen, for it was established to further the development of American bred horses and American hunting . . . The purse for the race is $3000 . . . But more than the money, each owner longs to place in his trophy room for the ensuing year, the National Cup, which is a perpetual trophy presented by W. Plunket Stewart, M. F. H., of the Cheshire Hounds . . .

This bowl was originally presented to Mr. Stewart by N. P. Perkins of London, England, with the dual purpose of commemorating a visit to this country and giving a worthy trophy for the encouragement of races of high caliber . . .

* * *

Eastern Horse Club Members Attend

ALL THOSE INTERESTED in fox hunting and hunt races are especially pleased that Mr. Stewart selected the Foxcatcher Steeplechase for this honor . . .

William duPont, Jr., M. F. H. of the Foxcatcher Hounds, is chairman of the race committee, which is doing its bit to further American races by offering a special prize . . . Every starter who completes the three-mile course over brush and high fences, will receive $100, and if the winner was bred in the United States the breeder will get an additional $100 . . . Trainers will also come in for their share of the spoils, as the trainer of the winner will get an additional $50 . . .

Many of the well-known gentlemen riders who have participated in the Eastern Horse Club meet at Clyde Park, Brookline, will be in the race . . . and who knows, but that the National Cup might rest in some Myopia or Groton trophy room for a season . . .

William B. Street, whose Maleita won the National Cup in '34, will undoubtedly try again, and Carroll Bassett, Dorothy West's cousin's husband, will probably be up on one of the contending horses . . .

Many members of the Eastern Racing Association, who are still hoping to revive their popular spring meetings at Clyde Park, are driving down to Maryland, for the races . . .

Assisting Mr. duPont with the plans for the race are Morris H. Dixon, G. Dudley Gray, John W. McComb, Alfred E. Bissell, Edmund C. McCune, and Mrs. George Randolph Scott . . .

Poet Laureate Guest at Wadsworth Home

MR. AND MRS. ELIOT WADSWORTH of Marlborough street have the great honor of being host and hostess for the rest of the week to John Masefield, Poet Laureate of England, who has come to this country to participate in the Tercentenary celebration at Harvard . . .

In England one of the honorary duties of the Poet Laureate is to write odes and verses concerning various national holidays and celebrations . . . but Mr. Masefield comes here to attend the exercises at Harvard and to read some verses he has written for the occasion. It will mark the first time that an English Poet Laureate has taken part in an American celebration . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Masefield arrived in New York this morning and came directly to Boston, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont of New York . . . He received an honorary degree from Harvard in 1918 . . .

Tea on Thursday for Caroline Pierce

CAROLINE PIERCE, daughter of Charles Sumner Pierce of Milton, who is presenting her to society at a tea party Thursday afternoon, has several post debutante and young married cousins who have made their debuts recently enough to give her helpful little suggestions to guide her along the debutante path . . .

Jessie Fay, daughter of Mrs. Edward H. Fay of Milton, one of the debutante's cousins, will be the head pourer at the tea Thursday afternoon at Mr. Pierce's Milton home . . . Miss Peggy Crosby is coming over from New York to help out at the tea tables and others interested in the success of the party are Alice Merriam, another cousin, who is the daughter of Mrs. Ralph Gray of Mt. Vernon street . . . and Mrs. John Buttrick (Helen Merriam) of Concord . . .

Eddie Fay, who recently came back from Cape Cod with the title of men's tennis champ in the Children's Hospital tournament at Pocasset, is also a cousin of Miss Pierce.

Chatty Notes of Society

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM MARSHALL BULLITT gave a dinner party Sunday evening at their home in Stockbridge, to celebrate the birthdays of their son, Thomas Bullitt and Frances Clucas, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell M. Clucas. There were about 20 young people present, including Nora Bullitt, post debutante of the household. Miss Clucas was presented at a large ball in the Berkshires a few weeks ago.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERIICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

"The Ground Work of Aviation," the second air course written exclusively for Junior Birdmen by experts of the U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce under approval of Director Eugene L. Vidal, will be published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, beginning next Sunday.

This course will consist of 24 lessons and one lesson with illustration, will be printed each Sunday on the Junior Birdmen page.

"The Ground Work of Aviation" will be totally different from the first course prepared by the government aviation experts as the latter covered all phases of the piloting of aircraft.

The new course will deal with the work of the airport manager, meteorologist, radio operator, traffic manager air line executive, air line dispatcher and aeronautical engineer.

For every pilot in the air there are at least eight men on the ground, some of whom have greater responsibilities and larger salaries than the flier.

All air-minded boys and girls who plan careers in aviation should read every one of the 24 lessons carefully, clip them for their scrapbooks and refer to them whenever occasion requires. Junior Birdmen are urged to tell their chums and schoolmates about this course.

The whole course will provide interesting and instructive reading. Written by personnel of the U. S. Bureau of Air Course, the government department which governs all commercial and civilian flying in the United States, its authenticity will be unquestioned.

The first course written for Junior Birdmen won the immediate and enthusiastic praise of members as well as that of flying men generally. The second course is sure to do so, too.

After the first course appeared in 52 lessons, one each Sunday for a year on the Junior Birdmen page, reprints were made and these in booklet form, selling for five cents each, are still in demand by members, non-members and adults. Each booklet contains 26 lessons, each with an illustration.

Miss Tolman Bride in Milton

MR. AND MRS. JOHN FENWICK TOLMAN of Milton announce the marriage of their daughter, Anna Louise Tolman, to John Beery Eldridge, of Marlboro.

The wedding took place in the garden of the Tolman home Saturday afternoon. An aisle was arranged between pillars crowned with vases of autumn flowers, leading to a small altar table arranged before a semi-circular hedge of tall greens.

Against the green background the bride's ivory lace and satin gown stood out in sharp contrast, and the bridesmaid's outfit of blue and rose moire with arm bouquets of fall flowers, blended with the other floral decorations.

Miss Wilhemina Martin was maid of honor and the six bridesmaids were the Misses Kathleen Martin, Marjorie Buchanan, Adelaide Ginn of Columbus, Ohio, Margaret Martin, Ethel Stevenson and Mrs. Esther Crossman.

Rev. Harold H. Cramer of Milton performed the ceremony and Howard Cole Ginn of Columbus, Ohio, was best man. Arthur Littlefield, Alvah Bradstreet, John C. Laney, Nelson Hart, Henry A. McLaughlin and David Buchanan were the ushers.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Tolman, wore a gown of wine colored velvet with gold accessories and a corsage of roses and delphinium and Mrs. Eldridge was gowned in black velvet with silver accessories.

Following a motor trip through Canada the bridal couple will be at home in Milton.

Philomatheia Season Planned

This afternoon at her estate, The Pines, in Wakefield, Mrs. Charles N. Winship entertained members of the Philomatheia Club with bridge and tea.

The proceeds of the affair will go to increase the scholarship fund of Boston College. This is the last of a series of summer parties held by prominent members of the club.

Plans were made for the busy fall social season and the weekly bridges to be held at the clubhouse, commencing in October.

* * *

At the first meeting of the Board of Directors of the Junior Philomatheia Club, last evening at the clubhouse, Commonwealth avenue, a series of social events was planned.

The first attraction will be the bridge and fur fashion show which will take place early in October. This will be followed by a membership dance to be given the latter part of October, in order to enable a presentation of new members. Miss Virginia Grimes received an enthusiastic welcome as president of the club for her second term.

Labor Split

This is the last in a series of articles detailing the labor activities of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

By HAROLD LORD VARNEY

UNITED with John L. Lewis and Sidney Hillman in the Labor Non-Partisan League is David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers.

DUBINSKY RECENTLY RESIGNED FROM THE SOCIALIST PARTY TO SUPPORT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AFTER 25 YEARS OF CONTINUOUS MEMBERSHIP.

Luigi Antonini, vice-president of Mr. Dubinsky's union, is the official head of the Labor Non-Partisan League for the State of New York.

Antonini is the outstanding Italian Socialist in the United States and, through his Dressmakers' Union, has been responsible for practically all the financing of the Italian Red daily, STAMPA LIBERA, which was recently made the official organ of the Italian Bureau of the American COMMUNIST PARTY.

Another of Mr. Dubinsky's vice-presidents, Charles S. Zimmerman, who was the floor leader of the C. I. O. forces at the recent convention of the New York State Federation of Labor, is a FORMER MEMBER OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY.

Whatever Mr. Lewis' personal aims may be, it is unquestionable that a very large proportion of the laborites who are aiding him in his fight for Roosevelt this year, are doing so with the open intent of turning the Labor Non-Partisan League into a Socialist Farmer-Labor party in 1940.

In Pennsylvania, the League has chosen as its executive director the veteran Socialist party leader, Joseph E. Cohen.

In New York the League has already forestalled 1940 by transforming itself into a so-called AMERICAN LABOR PARTY which will go along with Roosevelt and Lehman this year, but will continue to be open for business after election day.

This New York American Labor Party has already taken over the whole right wing of the Socialist Party, together with such significant Socialist institutions as the Rand School, the Debs Memorial Radio Station (which, incidentally, was selected to broadcast the proceedings of Mr. Lewis' recent L. N. P. L. convention at Washington), the NEW LEADER and the immensely influential Jewish DAILY FORWARD.

But the Lewisites in New York have not only wooed the Socialists; they have also taken over a large Federation of COMMUNIST CONTROLLED ORGANIZATIONS.

Months before the American Labor Party was launched, the Communists, in pursuance of their "United Front" tactics, formed a so-called "Trade Union Committee for a Labor Party."

They roped in 102 A. F. of L. local unions and 37 political and social clubs, practically all of which have cooperated in the past with various Communist-inspired enterprises.

When the American Labor Party was launched, there was much talk about keeping the Communists out, and OFFICIALLY that is still the policy.

* * *

However, on August 25th, the "Trade Union Committee" was admitted to the American Labor Party in a body, and was given four seats in the city executive body of the party.

The attitude of the radicals of all shades in entering Mr. Lewis' movement is one of confidence in its eventual destiny as an American third party.

Judge Jacob Panken, life-long Socialist, expressed this attitude in qualifying his support of Roosevelt this year when he said that "in some future time, the new labor party will become the Socialist party."

In the light of our analysis of the Committee for Industrial Organization and the Labor Non-Partisan League it is obvious that the question of whether John L. Lewis has definitely accepted the Left philosophy is merely academic.

Whether or not he THINKS with the Socialists, the more important fact is that he ACTS with the Socialists.

His present program, both in the trade union and the political fields, is a faithful application of the life-long precepts of Debs and Berger and Hillquit.

* * *

OBVIOUSLY, Lewis is wagering his whole future in this campaign in a daring political gamble.

If Roosevelt wins this November, Lewis will be tops, both in the trade union movement, through the C. I. O., and politically through his nascent Farmer-Labor party.

With the death of Floyd Olson, he remains the one virile, masterful personality in the American Left.

His success this year in capturing both Right Wing Socialists and Communists for the Roosevelt bandwagon has been a demonstration of an extraordinary gift for Left leadership.

The next four years may see him squeezing dry the advantages of his Roosevelt alliance, and setting up for himself as a major political factor in American politics.

Of course, the defeat of Roosevelt this November would be blasting to this hope.

But Mr. Lewis is a good enough poker player to be willing to accept this hazard.

THE END

PUBLISHERS IN PROTEST OVER STRIKE

(Special to American Newspapers, Inc.)

San Francisco, Sept. 15—Vigorously protesting "the lawless acts" of a minority group of editorial workers who, by mob violence, forced the Post-Intelligencer, Seattle's only morning paper, to close down in order to protect human life, 337 California publishers today were on record as unanimously decrying what they termed a "violation of the right of the freedom of the press."

A resolution, adopted unanimously by the executive committee and State Advisory Council of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association, was forwarded to officials of the State of Washington and the city of Seattle, because they are "charged with the responsibility of upholding the law."

The resolution reads:

FREE PRESS?

WHEREAS, the absolute freedom of the press is a right fundamental to the public welfare; and

WHEREAS, our whole democratic system of government is based upon the will of the majority; and

WHEREAS, those who won our independence believed, as we believe, that freedom to think as you will, and to speak as you think, are means indispensable to the discovery and spread of truth and sound government; and

WHEREAS, under our democratic system of government, the maintenance of free and public discussion of public questions in a free press is the duty of the press of the United States, protected by the federal constitution from invasion or abridgment from any source whatsoever; and

WHEREAS, In the City of Seattle, State of Washington, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer was, for the protection of its 650 loyal employes, forced to suspend publication by the activities of minority groups, having no connection with the newspaper publishing business, contrary to law and the constitutional guarantees aforesaid;

VIGOROUS PROTEST

NOW, THEREFORE, be it resolved by the advisory council and executive committee of the California Newspaper Publishers Association, representing three hundred thirty-seven newspapers of the state of California, that the activities of said minority groups be condemned as contrary to the American principle of majority control, and as a violation of the right of the freedom of the press; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that this association does most vigorously protest the lawless acts of said minority groups, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the officials of the state of Washington, and the city of Seattle, charged with the responsibility of upholding the law.

Lyric Wins Prize

Song Test Is Opened

Landon Merits In Tune

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Miss Marjorie D'Amore studies the title cover of "Oh, Susanna," sweeping the country as Governor Landon's campaign song. New lyrics to the song, pertaining to the campaign, may be entered in competition for a first national prize of $1000.

The Hearst $1000 national Landon campaign song contest opened today!

The winning entry of 112 submitted from all over New England, which entitles the composer to a cash prize of $10, came from Mrs. Fanny C. McEnroe of 45 Naples road, Melrose.

Mrs. McEnroe is now in line for the grand prize of $1000, a second of $500 or one of the 25 additional prizes of $20 each, being offered for the best words set to the music of the stirring "Oh! Susanna," written by Stephen Collins Foster.

You don't have to have a knowledge of music to enter your lyrics. If you know the tune, write the words. For your guidance the lyrics are being printed in today's Boston Evening American.

Everyone is on equal footing in this competition. If you have a native imitative quality that permits you to paraphrase the printed stanza of "Oh! Susanna," you may be the one to win that $1000, or any of the other attractive awards.

Once you understand the rules you are ready to compete. Entry blanks are NOT necessary.

Simply write or type your verses on ONE side of a sheet of paper and address them to the Landon Campaign Song Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop square, Boston.

Here's Mrs. McEnroe's daily winner:

Oh! from the state of Kansas comes a man we're glad to greet.
His name is Alfred Landon, and he's in the winner's seat.
He showed 'em there—he'll show us here—there can't be any doubt
He's just the man for President, and now let's hear you shout—

REFRAIN

Oh! Alf Landon, you're just the man for me.
We'll all have "happy Landin's when from Democrats we're free.

Mix Government and Business? Landon says that they won't jell.
He'll banish waste and showmanship. Say! Wouldn't that be swell!
He don't believe in "Boondoggling" and Alphabets are out.
He is our choice for President. Come, now, let's hear you shout—

Let Farmers plant just what they want—as little or as much,
For one of Landon's policies is, "Hands off! I won't touch!"
He's for a Strong Democracy, and War he'd like to rout.
Oh! He's the one for President. You'll prove it if you shout—

He plans to lower Taxes, for he says he'd like to cuss
When he sees money wasted. Oh! He's just like one of us.
He's Honest and he's Human and a thoroughly Good Scout,
Oh! We'll elect him President, but first let's give a shout—

"Oh! Susanna" Contest Rules

The Hearst Newspapers are inviting readers to submit words for a Landon campaign song, to be set to the music of "Oh! Susanna," widely known American classic.

Anyone may enter this competition by submitting new and original verses for the song, to be used in furthering the candidacy of Alfred M. Landon for President.

The opening date for entries shall be MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, and the closing date MONDAY, OCTOBER 12. Entries on the closing date will be eligible if bearing postmarks not later than midnight.

National prizes will be distributed by a jury of awards to be selected by the Hearst newspapers. These prizes will be:

First prize, $1000; second prize, $500; 25 additional prizes of $20 each.

In addition, a cash prize of $10 will be paid by the Boston Evening American for the best entry received daily during the duration of the competition. The publication of this entry in the Boston Evening American together with the name of the person submitting it shall serve as notification of each daily award.

Number of syllables in each line of the song should be the same as in the original "Oh! Susanna," accents of the syllables should likewise conform to the original so as to fit the air of the song, this detail being taken into account by the jury of awards in judging entries for prizes.

All verses submitted as entries should be addressed as follows:

Landon Campaign Song,
Boston Evening American or Boston Sunday Advertiser,
5 Winthrop Square,
Boston, Mass.

STOP THE REDS! WARNS EX-ATHLETE

SEES COMMUNISM SPREADING

By ARTHUR "DUTCH" BERGMAN
(Director of Athletics at Catholic University and Former Star Football Player at Notre Dame University)
Special to the American Newspapers, Inc.

Washington, Sept. 15 — Communism must be stopped, before it stops civilization.

As an alumnus of Notre Dame University I am keenly proud of the movement that institution has undertaken to combat the rise of the Reds.

Not many years ago, we took the subject of Communism rather lightly in this country. Reports of growing Communistic strength were scoffed at and publication of the objective—the overthrow of our democracy—was brushed aside as so much propaganda. But today it is different.

The Notre Dame movement is only one front on which the enemy will meet a stiff opposition. This is not a Catholic battle in any sense. It is a battle in which all true Americans will join. The menace of Communism is a menace against every man, woman and child in the length and breadth of this great nation.

Communism must be stamped out in this country before the radical germs spread and grow to a point where they are beyond control. We Americans can win this battle, but we must be prepared. We must not allow the enemy to steal a march on us. They are constantly equipping themselves, watchfully awaiting the moment to strike.

The Communist movement must be nipped in the bud. Let's start now.

Millions of us have prospered in this country. We have a good form of government. It has, of course, its shortcomings, but nothing human is perfect. The United States stands for freedom and the right to live according to a decent standard of living. Communism would mean the end of all these rights and privileges.

Jimmy Walker's Hero Dog Sails Sea

New York, Sept. 15 (INS)—"Winkie," a golden retriever, which arrived on the French liner Normandie, today had been claimed by former Mayor Jimmy Walker and Mrs. Walker.

The Walkers acquired "Winkie" when they lived in Surrey, England. "Winkie" was the hero of the fire that destroyed the cottage more than a year ago. Although only a puppy at the time, he barked to awaken Laura La Plante, actress, who was then occupying the cottage.

LAID OFF FROM WORK BY CONSTIPATION

"For four years I suffered from constipation. I had gotten so weak I had to lay off from work. My doctor told me to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since then, my grocery list has never been complete without it."—Mr. A. W. Murphy, 1010 16th St., Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

This delicious cereal will give you the same, sure relief. Laboratory tests prove it's safe. Within the body, its "bulk" absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the intestines. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B which tones the intestines, and iron for the blood.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Serve as a cereal or cook into appetizing recipes. Isn't this natural food better than pills and drugs?

When you're at the grocery store today, get a package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Try it a week, and see if you don't feel worlds better. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"GIVE ME YOUR HEART"

A NEW SERIAL

By Lewis Allen Browne

A COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTION TO BE RELEASED SOON BY WARNER BROTHERS

"Yes. He managed to escape one Saturday night through the kitchen window, with his father's week's wages. It never struck me as being dishonest. He wanted a better life, he wanted to climb out of the ash-heap of his birth to better things.

"He did. He succeeded, he founded a family tradition based on character and enterprise—something to be proud of, isn't it?"

"Yes," Linda agreed.

Surely you can understand my anxiety to have my family carry on?"

"Yes, but—"

"It will never be carried on unless you do as I beg."

"But how will that be possible?"

"Only ourselves will ever know that it is not Robert's legal child."

"But Robert's wife—"

"She knows already—"

"And hates me?"

"Nothing of the kind. She realizes that she can have no children, that she is practically a wife only in name. I don't know that she has forgiven either of you, but she will go through with it—go away, bring home the child as her own, and that is all that matters."

"Doesn't Robert's happiness matter?"

"Nothing matters except to carry on. There are two blameless parties, unfortunate Rosamond and the coming child. The child will have every advantage, a goodly heritage, and all will be well."

Linda twisted her fingers and tried to think.

"Does Robert's wife know who I am?" she finally asked.

"She has not asked, she never will ask. We have told her only that you are a young lady of education and excellent birth."

"That is so much better."

"Then you agree?" Lord Farrington was all eagerness again.

"Do you realize what you are asking, Lord Farrington?"

"More than you know. Did you want a child, Miss Warren?"

"No! Naturally not—but now—it is different."

"In America you will make a start, you will know that your child has everything, wealth, social position, and love. You may be certain that Robert's child will be loved."

Linda got up and walked to the window. Then she turned to him pleadingly.

"Perhaps you had better go, Lord Farrington," she said.

"To give you an opportunity to think better?"

"I can think clearly enough now, sir. I am sorry, but I cannot do what you ask."

"Then you haven't thought, my dear—not clearly. If you had, you would see my point of view."

"How about MY point of view? Have I no rights?"

"Just what IS your point of view, Miss Warren?"

"I didn't know, for certain, what it was, until just now. I have been too worried, and frightened, to think clearly, but now, tonight, when you asked me to give up my baby—this suddenly ceased being just a mess I have to get out of. I want this baby. It is a life I am responsible for—it isn't a responsibility that I can slip out from under. That is my point of view."

Lord Farrington came nearer to her and touched her arm.

"Miss Warren—Linda, my girl—what about the other point of view?" he asked.

"What other point of view?"

"This baby's point of view."

Linda gasped and drew back from him.

"Don't, please don't, put it like that!" she cried.

"It has to be faced. Can you put the child in a position equal to that he will fill as my grandson?"

"It may not be a son."

"True. Can you do as much for the child, regardless of sex?"

Linda was silent. There were tears welling in her eyes. Lord Farrington wanted to take her in his arms and comfort her, but, most of all, he wanted his grandchild, and so he continued.

"Can you provide a home like Farrington Castle—a name—succession to a title—and a father?"

Linda was sobbing, quietly.

"You did not expect Robert to desert his wife, Linda?"

"No! He wouldn't! He couldn't! I'd hate him if he did."

"I know it. That is why I regard you as a lady."

"But—will she—love the child?"

"If you had everything a woman could desire, home, title, splendid husband—everything except the one thing needed and expected of you—a child—you would love it, wouldn't you?"

"Yes."

It hurt Linda to be honest about it.

"Rosamond will love the child as if it were her own."

"No woman could do that, Lord Farrington."

"You will reproach yourself all your life if you rob this child."

"I cannot promise—I cannot!"

"My dear, go away as I suggested. Renounce all claims to the child, start a new life in America. Forget this episode altogether. You are young, beautiful—, any splendid men will desire you—"

"No! Not that."

"Forget this entirely."

"You say it as if it were going to be easy."

"Not at all. It won't be easy, but you are strong and, I hope, wise and unselfish."

"Unselfish?"

"Unselfish enough to let the child have our home, our wealth, our title."

"What about me? What about my longing for my own child?"

The door opened. Tubbs called from the hall, "A long session, what? Linda's aunt will be back soon, I fear."

"You must decide now, my dear," Lord Farrington said, as Tubbs entered the room.

"What is this, Linda—no decision? Oh come, my dear—it is the perfect solution," Tubbs urged, keenly disappointed because Linda had not accepted Lord Farrington's terms.

"It is easy enough to plan the disposition of some other person's baby, Tubbs."

"Oh, I say, Linda dear—"

Lord Farrington silenced him with a gesture and turned to Linda.

"We must not be here when your aunt returns—she is never to know about this—my dear, you must decide now."

Linda went over and poked the coals in the grate. Both men could see the tears.

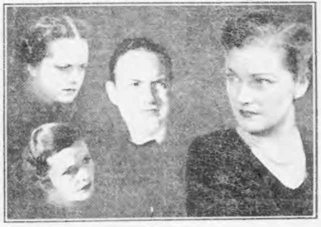
Shunned for Poor Speech



HOSTILE faces everywhere! What's turning the world against Carrie? Her shoddy speech, and nothing else!

"I'm REAL sorry for the HIRED HELP at Mrs. Catt's boarding-house," she says. "She does all she can to AGGRAVATE them. That's no way to LEARN 'em."

Using "real" for "very," the provincial term "hired help" for "servants" or "employees," "aggravate" for "annoy," "learn" for "teach"—that's the sort of error that simply brands you!

Other favorite slips of Carrie's are: "I didn't use to like them books" for "I never used to like those books"; "I sat opposite of John" for "I sat opposite to John"; "These are identically the same" for "These are identical" or "These are the same."

Sometimes, feeling vaguely that something is wrong with her speech, Carrie tries to be very grand. She'll say, "The street is very noisome today," under the impression that "noisome" is a refined term for "noisy." Of course, it means [illegible].

So Carrie's rating herself and people take her at her own low rating. They think she's cheap, dull, socially impossible. No wonder she meets frowns and snubs everywhere!

Arm yourself against illiterate English with our 32-page booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH. There they are listed—the pitfalls that betray you! Note them. Get rid of them. Start your speech campaign now!

Send 15c for our booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 103 West 10th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

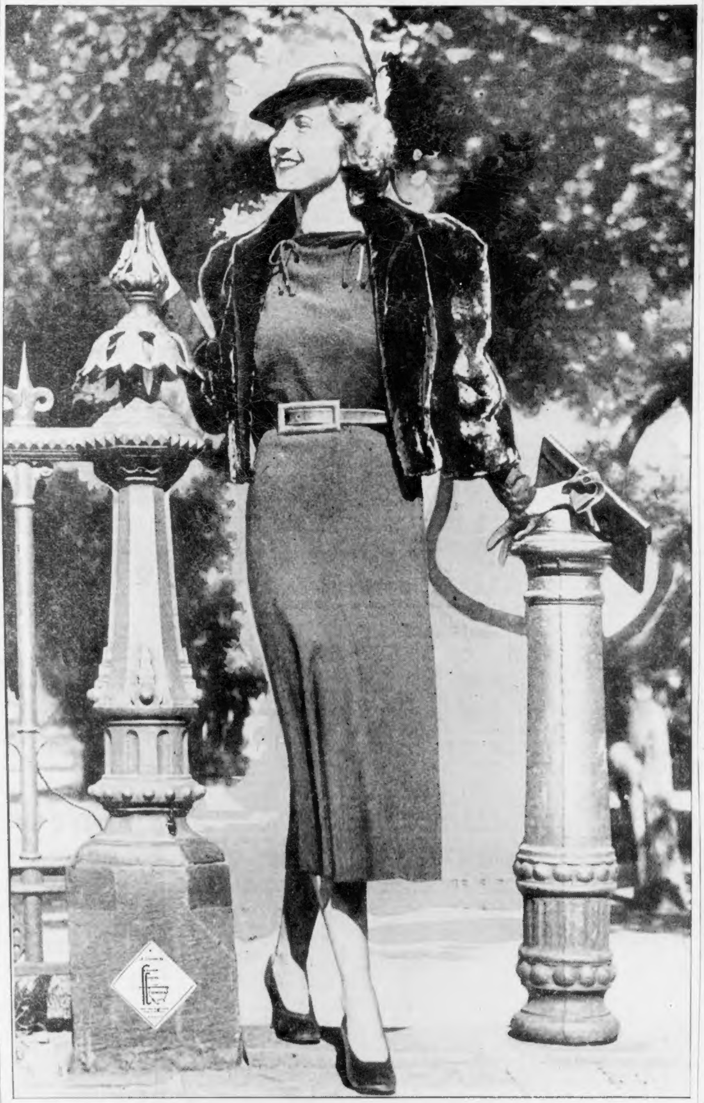
Costume Suit Has Its Own Fur Jacket



IT'S FOR the sophisticated young lady about town . . . for the debutante with an uninterrupted calendar of gay luncheons . . . for the daytime appearances of the career girl . . . for the smartest young matron or do-things clubwoman in your neighborhood . . . this safari brown costume suit of sheer wool frock and moleskin jacket. A Fashion Congress selection modeled by Miss Frances Shea.

Representative of an exciting new pairing idea—for it almost seems as though the lone coat or the lone frock for autumn is out of the picture—jackets have their own frocks, and frocks have their own coats. Everything's being ensembled.

Again, you see the smoothly fitted line that flares gently at the knee, and yet does none of the hateful cutting-in of the too-well known bias. The neckline of the frock is stretched across to shoestring ties. Widened shoulders, bracelet sleeves and a bolero line characterize the moleskin jacket.

For shopping information on this costume suit, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

INTRODUCTIONS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When a girl is introduced to a young man, on departing—which of the two should say, "I was glad to have made your acquaintance" or the like?

2—What should the answer be for such a remark? R.

1—First, may I say . . . about the wording of your question . . . that a "girl is not introduced to a man." It's the other way around . . . a man is introduced to a girl.

And, after an introduction, it is proper for either one to say, "I am glad to have met you," or "I am happy to have met you," or something pleasant like this. The one who is leaving is the one who says this. The phrase, "made your acquaintance," isn't a good one to use. It sounds provincial, and besides it's more difficult to say than the simpler "to have met you."

2—To this friendly and gracious "I am so glad to have met you," the one to whom it is said thanks first for the graciousness of the other, and then, naturally, adds something that will mean that the pleasure is a mutual one. For instance, "Thank you. I am glad to have met you, too;" or "Thank you. I'm happy to have met you, too. And I hope that I'm to see you again soon (or 'very soon')."

Correct Technique

An expert has many points of superiority over the average player, of course, but probably none of them is so important as the increased safety factor he employs.

The average player is much too prone to expect "good breaks." The expert is always pessimistic; he may hope for good breaks but he does not count on them except when he must assume a favorable lay of cards for the success of his contract.

Whenever safety measures are possible, he uses them.

Today's hand was played in a recent national tournament, and only two of the declarers were successful.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

West opened the fourth-highest heart, and dummy's ten was played to coax a cover from East if he had the Queen. The ten held the trick, however, and now at almost every table a split in the diamond suit was played for, in order to fulfill the nine-trick contract. The diamonds breaking four and two, this plan did not work. At only two tables was the correct technique used.

North:
♠ 8 7
♡ J 10 7 3
♢ A K Q 8
♣ K 7 4

West:
♠ A 10
♡ Q 6 5 4 2
♢ 4 3
♣ J 9 5 2

East:
♠ K Q 9 5 4
♡ 8
♢ J 6 5 2
♣ Q 10 3

South:
♠ J 6 3 2
♡ A K 9
♢ 10 9 7
♣ A 8 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

After winning the ten of hearts, dummy led a spade. At cursory glance, this might appear to be very dangerous, since South has not a sure spade stopper, but it should be noted that only in the exceedingly remote event that West should hold five spades could the spade suit be run off for that many tricks by the defenders.

I say "exceedingly remote" because that would mean that West had opened a heart from the Queen, holding five spades with two top honors (since even if West held five spades, if East held two honors the suit would be blocked).

A SLIM CHANCE

East put up the Queen of spades and, suspecting a hoax, returned a low spade which declarer ducked, and which was won by West's Ace. This gave the declarer a count on the spade suit, locating East with an original holding of five.

Now, when a heart was returned, declarer cashed both the Ace and King, East discarding a club and a spade. From there on it was simple. The Ace and King of diamonds were cashed, declarer unblocking the ten and nine, and were followed by the Ace and King of clubs.

Now the declarer had a choice of two different throw-in plays on East: he could lead the Queen and another diamond, compelling East to concede the last spade to the Jack, or concede East two spade tricks for a forced lead up to dummy's Queen-eight of diamonds.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHEN YOU REACH the point where you could count calories in your sleep without it making an ounce of difference on the weight scales, don't give up. While you've been losing weight your body may have been storing water.

Try to take some comfort from the fact that the scientists who know all about it, regard water storage as one of the most puzzling factors of the entire weight problem—gaining or reducing.

Think of the change that can be made in weight in just a few hours and you can appreciate the effect of water retention on your weight loss: In seventy minutes of hard play a football player lost fourteen pounds of weight! In three hours a Marathon runner lost eight and one half pounds, and after a few hours on the courts a tennis player weighed six pounds less.

The explanation of these losses is that the bulk of the lost weight was in water, and as soon as the water is replaced the weight returns to the old figure. However, the cases of these athletes performing violent exercise serves to illustrate the importance of water as the variable weight factor. It makes rate of loss one of the most unpredictable elements of your figure program. Although on a low calorie diet you are continually breaking down your store of fatty tissue for energy, an increase in storage of water may delay the registration of this weight loss on the scales.

Do not think that water retention has anything to do with the water you drink. It does not. Salt and bicarbonate of soda are found to increase water retention in some cases, but water drinking is not a factor. You should drink eight glasses daily.

Another thing . . . check your measurements. Frequently, measurements are found to change in advance of a registration of weight loss, and the improvement in measurements may be all out of proportion to that in weight. It pays to keep a double check—weight and measurements.

When you become discouraged about your weight and think you were born to be fat—take heart and carry on according to your low calorie plans. You can lose if you stick with a diet that enables you to draw on your stored fat—regardless of water storage.

MY NEIGHBORS ALL RAVE ABOUT SPRY CAKES AND PASTRY! DOESN'T THIS PIE LOOK MARVELOUS?
EVERYONE'S WILD ABOUT FOODS FRIED IN SPRY, TOO—THEY'RE CRISPER, TASTIER—AS EASY TO DIGEST AS PLAIN BREAD—AND NO SMOKY, SMELLY KITCHEN

GREATER BOSTON sings praises of Spry

243,000 local women have already used it!

SPRY must be a better shortening. It's made such an amazing hit everywhere. In 3 short months 3 million women all over the country used it. In many places more than half the families have used Spry.

Spry is whiter, smoother, creamier. It's a purer ALL-vegetable shortening—so pure that it stays fresh and sweet right on the pantry shelf. No need to keep in the ice-box—always soft and easy to cream. Fries without smoke or unpleasant odor.

Use Spry for all your baking and frying. Watch the family sit up and take notice. Hear them boast about the new lightness and fineness of your cakes and biscuits. Sing the praises of your tender, flaky pastry—your crisp, tasty fried foods that are as easy to digest as if baked or boiled. Don't delay. Try Spry now.

DARING OFFER

Buy a can of Spry from your grocer. Give Spry every test in pies, cakes, biscuits, fried foods. If you don't find Spry the best shortening you ever used, write to Lever Brothers Company, Cambridge, Mass., stating briefly your reasons for not preferring Spry. Send your name and address and the strip of tin that the key takes off when you open the can. You will promptly receive back twice what you paid for Spry. This offer is limited to one can to a family.

Novelty Shortcake Recipes

By MARTHA LEE

THE WORD shortcake always brings a picture of luscious red berries piled high on delicate mounds of biscuit with some of the rich juice trickling down the sides.

But that's not all—as a matter of fact, it is only the [illegible] to be connected for main [illegible] pastry and fruits or creamed meats.

[illegible] and top with a [illegible] to which nutmeg has been added.

Another favorite shortcake is [illegible] shortcake. [illegible] rich corn [illegible] there will [illegible]

[illegible] together with sliced bananas and [illegible] whipped cream. This is a [illegible] that can be served [illegible] of the year.

Individual shortcakes are always popular. These may be made of a rich biscuit dough or from a [illegible] mixture. Most fruits [illegible] they should be [illegible] in a light syrup [illegible] Cream sauces [illegible] or fruit juices [illegible] with them.

During the [illegible] season there is [illegible] at home and [illegible] cakes can easily be [illegible] and are popular [illegible] be [illegible] in advance [illegible] be tasty when [illegible] baked and [illegible] a covered casserole [illegible] can be [illegible] and the [illegible] wanted.

FOUNDATION SHORTCAKE RECIPE

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 6 tablespoons shortening
- 1 egg
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar (for a fruit shortcake, omit when using with meats)
- ¾ to 1 cup milk or water

Sift the dry ingredients, cut in the shortening. Mix the egg with the milk and add to the shortening mixture. Mix quickly with a fork and pat out to the desired shape or size. Prick with a fork. Bake in a hot oven of 450 deg. F. for 12 to 15 minutes.

GINGER SHORTCAKE

- 1 cup brown sugar
- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup rich milk
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup molasses
- 2 ½ cups flour
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 1 tablespoon ginger
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk

Cream the shortening and sugar well. Add the eggs well beaten and the rich milk with the molasses. Sift the dry ingredients together and add alternately with the milk to the shortening mixture. Pour into two [illegible] pans and bake in a moderate oven of 350 deg. F. for 25 to 30 minutes. When cold, put together with sliced bananas that have been dipped in lemon juice to keep them from discoloring, then sprinkled with powdered sugar. Frost over with whipped cream and decorate with more bananas.

PLANTATION SHORTCAKE

- 2 eggs
- 2¼ cups sifted meal
- 2 cups buttermilk
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 3 teaspoons baking powder

Put the shortening into a bowl and cream well. Add the eggs [illegible] All the [illegible] with the meal [illegible] to make a [illegible] batter. Beat until smooth. Pour into two cake pans and bake in a hot oven of 450 deg. F. for 15 to 20 minutes. Keep hot and when ready to serve put together with creamed chicken, veal or pork.

FOUNDATION SHORTCAKE (Cake Batter)

- 1-3 cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- ½ cup milk
- 1¾ cups flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt

Blend well the shortening and sugar. Separate the eggs and beat the yolks into the shortening mixture with the sugar. Sift together the dry ingredients and add alternately to the shortening mixture with the milk. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 deg. F. for 20 to 25 minutes. Individual shortcakes may be made with this batter. Use fruit and sauces as desired.

Luscious Cologne Bubbling Like Champagne in New Carbonated Form

By ARLINE GOULD

LUSCIOUS eau de cologne . . . bubbling like champagne . . . makes you think of love, laughter and gay music as it flows over your skin.

Carbonated eau de cologne [illegible] to use it is a blissful experience. It's [illegible] in a [illegible] seltzer bottle that is the most intriguing bit of luxury we've seen in many months.

The seltzer bottle is a reproduction of the siphon which a country gentleman uses for his nip of Scotch and soda, except that it's smaller and all dressed up in glamor for a lovely lady's dressing table.

The bottle is made of emerald green glass and the siphon head is of a superb green gold leaf. A black and [illegible] the name of the famous perfumer and the odor of the [illegible] cologne.

The effervescence gives to the cologne [illegible] a sparkling [illegible] almost startling in its freshness. This is the first time that cologne has been presented in this carbonated form and the [illegible] ness of the idea combined with the loveliness of the fragrant cologne creates an impudent charm that is irresistible.

The bubbling eau de cologne provides a "cocktail" for the skin which makes a woman feel young in years and old in feminine wisdom. It gives her a fragrant aura which clings hauntingly for hours.

It is an ideal gift for any woman and would be particularly cherished by one who [illegible] to possess the newest and most sophisticated [illegible]

Jewish Congress:

Israel's Enemies Reveal Weakness

By ATTORNEY WILLIAM M. PLATT

It [illegible] would seem rather futile for a group of delegates representing a larger body of people, to congregate in Geneva merely to talk over their troubles, for that is primarily what the World Jewish Congress amount to. But the modern thinkers, beginning with Bacon, have taught us that what "seems likely" is not always true, and that cause and effect are seldom obvious, often not apparently logical.

FOOTBALL MEN STAND OR FALL ON STANCE

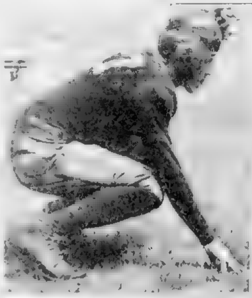
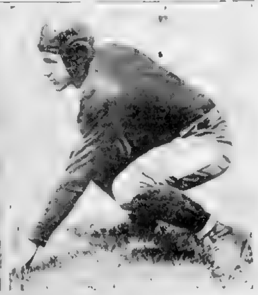
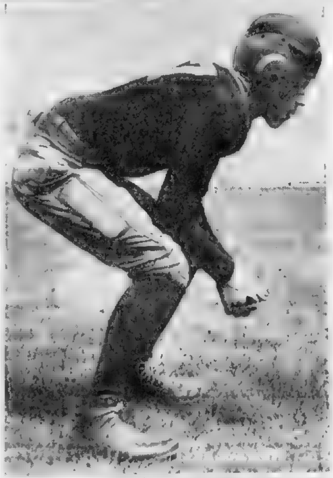
PROPER STANCE VITAL FOR FOOTBALL PLAYER





ABOVE WE SEE Walt Holmer, B. U. backfield coach, showing the crouch in backfield stance. It is similar to line stance and is recommended to new players for if they stay down and look straight ahead there is very little chance that they will give the play away.

DICK VAN IDERSTINE, above, shows the tripod base which linemen should use, Dick has his left hand down and his right foot forward. The opposite is true for those who use their right hand on the ground. Another name for this stance is the three-point stance. Position means a great deal.



WALT HOLMER shows the other accepted backfield stance above which is semi-erect with hands or elbows resting on the knees. The Notre Dame shift and many other systems, particularly those using a shift, employ this stance for their backs. Read Pat Hanley's article for full particulars on correct position

COACH HANLEY Says Tripod Gives FASTEST START

By L. B. "PAT" HANLEY
Head Coach of Boston University

Stance, or starting position, is as important in football as it is in all other games

It is the base from which a player operates and the basis for every fundamental movement he will make on the field, whether he is a lineman or back.

There is no one model of stance that is generally accepted by every coach, but they generally agree that the position should combine the following elements:

Freedom of action and movement from a position that is neither cramped or tiring, and which does not vary for different plays

In [illegible]

LINE STANCE

The var[illegible] of scrimmage

The rules therefore permit the sprint start, the standing start, or both hands on the ground and the tripod or three point stance. The latter type is the most effective and widely used because of its adaptability to either straight ahead charging or pulling out of line.

The simplest method of getting [illegible]

[illegible] rected at the [illegible]

It is [illegible]

There is little question that a narrow, sprint type of start is the best method for speedy straight ahead starting. Modern football demands that a lineman should always be in a position to charge ahead and at an angle forward, or to leave his position, pulling out to block or lead a play. Certainly the tripod base is best suited to these demands

They must conceal intentions to block or delayed ball carrying in the same manner as those players who are in original position to handle the ball. PURPLE Stalwart TO QUIT

TEAM LOSES DAUGHTERS

By WALTER KILEY

Dr. Eddie Anderson and his Holy Cross football chances for the coming season received a severe jolt today when Bob Daughters, one of the Purple's greatest ends in history, told the writer that he would probably forego the game in this, his senior year.

Daughters, 192 pounds, is a former all-scholastic football and baseball player at Watertown high. For the past two years he has been one of the Purple line mainstays and Dr. Anderson had high hopes for him this fall.

His failure to show up when Holy Cross [illegible] practice last week [illegible] but he was expected momentarily. He told us:

"This is my last year in college, and I want to make it my best. My only thought is to finish in fine standing in studies. I would like to make the honor role if possible. I think I can and I want nothing to distract me in my efforts.

Likes Coach

"I hate to leave the team for I admire Dr. Anderson greatly and the same goes for everything and everybody connected with Holy Cross. I have talked things over with Holy Cross authorities, told them my feelings and said that I would rather not play.

"However, if they feel that my absence will hurt, I will still report and do my best. I will know definitely within a day or two."

Daughters told us that he has two or three positions in mind for which he is pointing after graduation next June.

Reading between the lines it is our impression that he is pointing towards a professional baseball career. He was the outstanding third baseman in college ball a year ago with major league scouts looking him over in game after game.

It seems to us that it is his fear of a permanent injury, one which would ruin his baseball chances which indicates his football decision at this time.

In the meantime Daughters, a big, kab red head warns that his brother Don, 188-pound, 19-year-old sophomore on Dick Harlow's Harvard team has it all over him and should be watched.

"He's got everything," Bob says of Don. "He was a great schoolboy end, far better than I was. I think he will have a wonderful future at Harvard."

Irish A. A. A. Bout Entries Mounting

All signs are pointing to both plenty of spirited boxing and a real audience of fistic fans of both sexes when the Irish-American A. A. swings back into action next Monday night for the 1936-1937 season at the Boston Arena.

The classes that night, all open, will be 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds and heavyweight, and already entries are coming in from Greater Boston and other parts of the state and New England.

Mat Grand Slam

DICK STAHL, new heavyweight mat sensation, picks them up and lays them down something like this when chalking up a victory. He says this will happen to Bidder McCoy when they clash at the Arena tonight in a Boston American Christmas Basket Fund match.

BASKET Fund Bout at ARENA

BRUNO, HUGHES IN SEMIFINAL

Bob "Bibber" McCoy will leap into the ring a favorite to whip Dick Stahl, the German Oak, in the feature of the Price-Dellamano wrestling show tonight at the Boston Arena for the benefit of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

[illegible]

Eight Bouts

[illegible]

A glimpse at the supporting card reveals seven sparkling bouts. The semi-final will be Fred Bruno vs. Cowboy Hughes, special bouts will be Frank Doyle vs. Salvatore Balbo, nephew of the famous Italian air chief, Fred Moran vs. Steve Lassas the "man with a thousands holds," and Wildman Lloyd Stewart vs. the slugging Bull O'Hara, preliminaries will be Bobby Marshall vs. Ralph Dickson, Jr., Al Bachant vs. Marshall Muise and Marcel LaFayette, the new orchid of France, vs. Heinie Olson, one of the famous Olson twins from Minnesota.

This is a standard collection of wrestling talent and the customers will be given plenty of action [illegible]

Bruno and Hughes, the [illegible] are winners of recent battle royals at the Arena who are expected to try to tear one another apart in the semi-final, a bout which may steal the entire show.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says everybody has had at least one adventure. James J. Bartell, 62 Fayette street, Cambridge, won one hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of the page.

LEWIS HANEY ON BUSINESS

Landon Maine Speech HITS AT POLITICIANS Running Business

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Sept. 15—Last week marked the definite entry of the country into the immediate pre-election period, when politics becomes the dominant interest.

Governor Landon, in his Maine speech, struck a telling blow at the heart of the New Deal, driving home the futility of the politicians' attempt to run the business of the country. It was a fighting speech.

President Roosevelt has, meanwhile, tried to maintain a jaunty "non-political" pose, talking of green pastures and reminding farmers how much government debt he has incurred in order to send them their doles.

He could not help showing his spots, however, for at Charlotte, N. C., he argued for the unconstitutional National Recovery Administration, and later he stated that he proposes to put the government into the business of producing electricity regardless of cost.

* * *

Probably for a few weeks, the net effect will be to emphasize the uncertainties in the political outlook. This may slow up new business plans, and somewhat retard the expansion in capital goods industries. It is not to be forgotten that as long as Roosevelt has a chance, the future will remain insecure both for savers and for investors.

Government spending, however, will keep on, and this is stimulating the buying of consumer goods. The increasing effectiveness of opposition to the Roosevelt regime, together with the growing pressure of idle bank credit, has started enough activity in the heavy industries to insure new high levels for the period since the depression.

After a little irregularity here, I look for the indexes of industrial activity to push to a new peak for the recovery before the end of the year.

* * *

Last week, steel production declined, being affected by the late Labor Day holiday, and by the transition going on in the automobile industry. This was but temporary, however. The mark-up in prices of some steel products for the fourth quarter will drive in buying. Anyhow, the automobile manufacturers have now turned the corner in production for the new season and are taking more steel.

It is noteworthy that the price of steel scrap continued to climb last week.

The fact is that it is rather difficult to find any important industry that does not show gains in activity. Perhaps wool manufacturing and shoes are as backward as any, but it is hard to believe that continued inflation through government spending will not galvanize all consumer lines into greater activity before long.

* * *

Commodity price averages edged up to a new high for the year, led by farm products and international goods. The drouth, and war or war preparations, were the chief causes. In the cases of such articles as tin, cotton, silk and cocoa, the strength of the pound sterling was doubtless a factor.

As the crop marketing period passes, I look for drouth shortages and increased consumption to bring a higher commodity price level, aided by the growing inflation of bank credit.

* * *

In this connection, the week's news called attention to two important developments. One was the political and financial weakness of France, where the radicals began a series of demoralizing strikes, while the "Popular Front" government plunged further into the slough of unbalanced budgets. A result was the steady outflow of gold, much of which came to the United States. This hastens the day of general repudiation through debasement or devaluation of currencies.

The other was the demand of steel workers for higher wages. Coming at a time when investors in the industry had begun to hope for some return, and when prospects suggest that new investments may be required, this is disturbing.

BOYCOTT On U.S. Goods LOOMS

IN SOUTH AFRICA

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—A threatened boycott of American products in South Africa—one of this nation's most profitable markets—presented the state department today with a serious problem.

The State, Agriculture and Treasury departments are attempting to work out an amicable solution of trade differences before the controversy develops into a costly trade war.

South African wine and fruit producers are conducting the campaign to boycott American products in favor of purchases from England and other British countries, officials said. The South Africans protest that American import regulations discriminate against their products.

* * *

The balance of trade between the two nations is heavily in favor of the United States and the wine and fruit producers have been unable to build up their markets here.

During the past five years American exports to Suoth Africa totalled $164,321,000, as against imports from that country of $17,069,000. Exports last year were $52,864,000, as against imports of $3,610,000.

American officials said today, however, that American trade with the British Empire practically balances at $2,000,000,000 and that South Africa benefits considerably from it. For example, they said that in 1935 alone the United States imported more than $15,000,000 worth of diamonds, all of which originally came from South Africa, although shipped here from other countries.

* * *

Declaring there is no discrimination against South African goods, they said wine and fruit imported from there is subjected only to the same regulations imposed on products from any other country.

Francis B. Sayre, assistant secretary of state, said the Agriculture Department is conducting experiments in Mediterranean fruit fly control which will have an important bearing on any solution of the controversy over sanitary regulations.

As a result of heavy losses from fruit crops infested by the fruit fly just after the World War, the Agriculture Department requires that fruit imported be subjected to a 15-day refrigeration under department supervision upon landing. The object is to kill any insects.

The South Africans assert their fruit is refrigerated for 20 days in vessels en route and that the refrigeration here adds to the cost and delays sales.

New York City Omnibus Corp. reports gross operating revenue for July amounted to $573,311, comparing with $546,465 in June.

100 P.C. Steel Rate SEEN

IN NEXT FEW YEARS

New York, Sept. 15 — The possibility that steel production at its peak in the present business cycle may reach 100 per cent of present theoretical annual capacity of 70,000,000 tons of ingots, is suggested, although not forecast, in a current analysis of potential steel demand by industries, just published by the Standard Statistics Company, of New York.

Production of 70,000,000 tons of ingots would be necessary to fill orders for 49,000,000 tons of finished steel which various important trades might need, provided their production peaks fell together in one of the next several years, and provided that the current cyclical business recovery runs its full course.

Despite the fact that industrial activity generally is currently running at only about 75 per cent of the 1929 level, steel production at the present time is being maintained at an annual rate of less than 10 per cent below that year. As a full cyclical recovery in business has not yet taken place, it is interesting to examine future possibilities for some answer to the question: How high can steel production go under the most favorable set of conditions.

Using the annual Iron Age estimates of finished steel distribution as a base, the Standard Statistics Company has prepared estimates of possible consumption of finished steel by each major consuming outlet during its best year in the upward phase of the present business cycle, as follows:

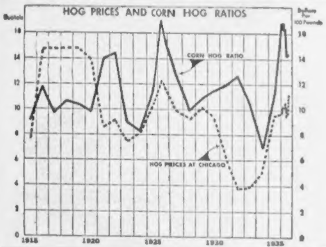
	*1929 (1000 Tons)	†Potential Max. in current cycle
Building industry	6,700	8,600
Railroads	6,900	7,500
Automobile	7,300	8,525
Oil, gas and mining	4,300	4,300
Metal containers	2,000	3,300
Agriculture	2,250	3,000
Machinery	1,200	2,400
Exports	2,250	1,500
Miscellaneous	7,700	9,875
	40,600	49,000

*Estimated by Iron Age.
†Estimated by Standard Statistics Co.

This total of 49,000,000 tons may be assumed to indicate the maximum potential demand for finished steel. It should not be considered a forecast as the assumption is made arbitrarily that all outlets will enjoy their best years simultaneously.

In its best previous year, the building industry took 7,100,000 tons of finished steel; in 1935, its takings were 2,865,000 tons. In recent years, the use of steel in construction has materially increased, particularly in the erection of smaller structures. It is not unreasonable to assume that in the peak year of the present cycle, demand will be about three times the 1935 total, or 8,600,000 tons.

HOG RAISING



VIEWED Corn-Hog Ratios Shown

Raising and marketing of hogs is one of the important sources of farm income.

Since hogs depend upon corn for food, a definite relationship must exist between the two that is dependent on climatic and economic conditions.

Such a relationship is expressed in the well known corn-hog ratio. This ratio is simply the number of bushels of corn required to buy 100 pounds of live hog, based on averages of farm prices of corn and hogs.

The solid line on the chart shows the corn-hog ratio since 1915. The factors that affect the trend of the corn-hog ratio are corn production and corn and hog prices. Generally speaking, a small corn crop is reflected in a small supply of hogs with an accompanied rise in the corn-hog ratio.

The broken line on the chart shows hog prices. The low corn crop of 1934 and 1936, reducing the number of hogs for marketing, has sent prices soaring from about $4 in 1933 to over $11 so far this year.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Sept. 15—Wall street rail observers have been wondering whether Western Pacific Railroad has "turned the corner" and is now on the upgrade.

Heavier gross revenues are currently being registered than were rung up a year ago, and for August the road may show net operating income for the first time this year. The road's operating position has been continually improving. In May that road had a net operating deficit of $149,000, against net operating income of $149,000 in May, 1935. In June the road had a net operating deficit of $343,000, against a net operating deficit of $57,000. In July the net operating deficit of $73,000 was smaller than the net operating deficit of $80,000 for the like 1935 month. Rehabilitation of plant and equipment is under way. This is expected to prepare the road for heavier traffic and at the same time, make possible the effecting of substantial economies in operation. The road currently is undergoing reorganization under Section 77 of the bankruptcy laws. Freight traffic is running around 12 per cent ahead of a year ago. For the first 35 weeks of the year, freight traffic topped the like 1935 period by better than 18 per cent.

* * *

Rio Grande Gross Intake Is Higher

When the Interstate Commerce Commission opens hearings on the management plan for reorganization of Den & Rio Grande Western Railroad on Oct. 20, the road's improved gross intake may be one of the important items of a current nature laid before the presiding I. C. C. officials. The road's gross currently is running well ahead of a year ago, and last month it topped 1935 by better than 28 per cent. For the first eight months of the current year Rio Grande gross is almost 25 per cent above the like 1935 period. The Rio Grande is expected to show a net operating deficit of about $130,000 for August, against a net operating deficit of $148,000 in the preceding month and net operating income of $71,000 in August, 1935. This year's operating deficits in part reflect spending for plant rehabilitation and improvement.

Oil Burner Shipments Make Big Gains

Cheerful news for the oil industry appears in the figures on shipments of oil burners compiled by the United States bureau of census. Shipments of burners, such as are used in heating plants, during July totaled 17,220, against 9760 last year. Shipments in June this year amounted to 14,449 units. Shipments of distillate burners, which are used in cooking and water heating units, totaled 37,959 in July, compared with 10,722 last year, and 21,849 in June this year.

Small Units Lead Auto Sales Gain

Complete statistics on July automobile registrations disclose a larger percentage increase for several of the so-called independent manufacturers than the recognized leaders such as Chrysler and Ford. Only General Motors exceeded the lesser units in the ratio of increase compared with 1935. Its sales gained 40.9 per cent. Chrysler was up 32.1 per cent, while Ford was down 0.4 per cent. The three biggest companies accounted for 91.56 per cent of total business in that month. Among the independents the best gains in July were shown by Studebaker with 39.5 per cent and Hudson with 46.1 per cent. Total registrations for the industry were up 25.4 per cent over July, 1935.

Hearst Stock Dividend Paid

San Francisco, Sept. 15—In today's mail, Class A stockholders of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., are receiving their 25th dividend checks.

By the same mail they are being informed that net earning per share for the first six months of this year on the Class A stock issued and outstanding amounted to $2.03 per share.

Dividend requirements for the full year amount to $1.75 per share.

The properties of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., consist of 15 newspapers published in New York, Chicago, Baltimore, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, San Antonio, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle; the American Weekly Magazine and radio station WCAE located at Pittsburgh, thus providing nation-wide diversification of earning power.

Washington Notebook

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Census Bureau reports that shipments of locomotives totaled 117 in August compared with 125 in July and 40 in August, 1935 . . . Unfilled orders at the end of August were set at 66 compared with 75 at the end of July and 8 at the end of August, 1935 . . . The figures do not include locomotives produced by railroads in their own shops . . . In another report, the bureau says shipments of industrial electric trucks and tractors by 10 leading manufacturers totaled 125 in August compared with 113 in July and 78 in August, 1935.

The Commerce Department reports that American travelers abroad now "are largely business people on a fairly definite errand, some of them going abroad three or four times a year . . . "They don't get very far off the beaten path and are not greatly interested in quaint customs or foreign atmosphere . . . They want the same service and creature comforts that they expect on any business trip at home."

Advices to the Commerce Department from representatives in foreign countries include: Sweden, foreign trade in July highest since 1930. Bolivia, decree tightens restrictions governing exchange and importations. France, exposition planned at Lille.

TRADE Co-Ops PRAISED

BY NEW DEALERS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

It has been fashionable among New Dealers to devise ways and means of changing the established channels of trade.

And, if going enterprises are crushed in the process, there has been some thought as to newer agencies to replace them.

The latest vogue among the advanced thinkers at Washington is to praise the European consumer co-operatives.

In the emotiodalism of phrase-making, there is no disposition to look at the total results of American business enterprise, which has achieved higher living standards for the people then enjoyed in other countries.

There is seemingly little practical recognition of the fact that the name of the organization is less important than the degree of efficiency with which it works.

Some years ago, a British manufacturer toured the country, lecturing in behalf of the idea of profit sharing with workers. His plan seemed thoroughly alluring. Finally one of his American competitors submitted his proposition to the test of bookkeeping. He found that at the time the British concern was paying distinctly lower wages than its American competitors, was charging its customers vastly higher prices, but was making substantially less net profits for its stockholders. The difference between the British and the American performance lay in efficiency of operations.

The British enterprise lacked the spur of a true competitive situation in the home market.

Before he was through, the American demonstrated that with the new profit sharing plus existing wages, the British worker would receive less than the American toiler was then receiving in wages alone.

A recent survey by the American Retail Federation indicated that consumer co-operatives already in existence in the United States last year did a volume of about $200,000,000, which is about half the figure estimated by the Co-operative League of the United States.

Total purchases of all types of co-operatives, including the farmers' associations and the co-operative credit agencies, amounted to $400,000,000 in 1935—a drop in the bucket compared with the total turnover.

It has been computed that one-half of 1 per cent of total retail sales were made by consumer co-operatives.

Of the 6000 co-operatives in the United States, one-third are in direct competition with retailers. One-third are credit unions, and the remainder are farmers' organizations, which are primarily selling, rather than buying, agencies.

COTTON MILLS

Operating AT RECORD Levels

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Domestic cotton mills are operating at close to the highest levels on record for this time of year, according to statistics issued by the New York Cotton Exchange.

The real measure of this improvement is best understood when it is realized current activity is on a basis about 12 per cent above the average for this time of year recorded during the pre-depression period 1922-27.

All this means that the backward member of New England's big industrial three—cotton, wool and shoes—is verging on renewed prosperity. Particularly since the position of the mills is now strengthened by the fact cotton goods prices have risen more than the price of raw stock. This featuring more favorable manufacturing margins. Further the technical position of the industry is sound. Most divisions are well sold ahead, and supplies of numerous important classes of goods are so limited that distributors and consumers are having difficulty in obtaining desired deliveries.

* * *

The bond market continues to turn in a somewhat mixed appearance when the action of the various important groups is viewed through our charted records of the Associated Press averages. First in importance, in our way of looking at it, is the excellent behavior of the rails index. It is just a shade under the highest level set for the bull market and does not yet indicate a desire to flatten out. Next comes the foreign section, where the index stands at the best price reached since late March. This despite the French situation, Spanish revolution and sundry war speeches. Industrials and utilities continue in the same rut that contained them when we last wrote on bonds. It is a narrow affair, less than a point wide, that has prevailed since June.

* * *

Notebook: The manner in which industrial and utility bonds balked about following the rails higher was just about the perfect pointer action of related equities . . . Tape readers think American Metals, Anaconda, American Smelting and Western Union have behaved well . . . To which we add Allied Stores, Budd and Studebaker . . . Just to have some low-priced stocks in such a list . . . And the chartists will tell one that the motors, motor accessory and small steels look very well on the work sheets . . . Also aviations.

* * *

The market is now ready for its big test. Prices worked off in the prescribed manner to just above the resistance levels noted here. More time may be spent around these prices. Then the ordinary sequence of events calls for a rally. And the nature of this rally will provide the test we write of and determine nearby trading and investment policies. If it is a half-hearted affair, readers are advised to lighten holdings without delay, for something more serious than the declines seen so far will seem a certainty.

* * *

Gleanings: We should watch for stubborn resistance at most recent highests . . . In the industrial section particularly . . . For this is the group that by refusing to move up with the rails is responsible for halting the rise . . . Thus preventing the rails from getting above their 1933 highs . . . Last Friday we suggested failure in the last natured direction would be reason to start selling . . . Those who did not do so now have their second chance . . . If selling proves premature there will be plenty of time to repurchase on clear re-establishment of an uptrend . . . In such as General Motors, Chrysler, Electric Auto-Lite, American Rolling Mill, Republic Steel, Douglas, United Aircraft and Curtis Wright.

MARKET Trend MIXED

DEALINGS QUIET

New York, Sept. 15 — The stock market blew hot and cold today on the Maine election results and prices got nowhere in particular.

The list made a feeble attempt to rally at the opening, but profit-takers again stepped into the arena and cut down many of the leaders fractions to a point or more.

Dealings were on the quiet side near the fourth hour, however, and a number of issues found buying support.

Wright Aeronautical, a 10-share trading unit, got up more than 5 points on top of yesterday's jump. This company, a subsidiary of Curtis-Wright, was reported to have received substantial orders for new airplane motors.

Seaboard Airline was one of the most active issues at a small gain. Others in the resistant area included Standard Oil of California, International Nickel, Anaconda, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, U. S. Steel and Republic Steel.

In the backward column were Chrysler, Crucible Steel, Sears-Roebuck, American Can, J. I. Case, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Servel, Libby-Owens, Loew's, Western Union, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, Bethlehem, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Southern Pacific, Illinois Central and Delaware & Hudson.

Bonds generally held to a restricted groove. Sterling was in demand, believed to be from Continental sources, and pushed up to its highest level in terms of the dollar for the past two years. Commodities were mixed.

Current Topics

While Wall Street analysts apparently were at odds in their interpretation of yesterday's voting, most seemed to find cheerful implications in news from railroad, steel, electric power and merchandising fields.

While the Maine election held most of the attention in the boardroom, traders found time to study economic developments.

Followers of the coppers noted with satisfaction latest statistics disclosing a drop of nearly 27,000 tons in world supplies of the red metal during August. In view of world shipments during the month it was believed present stocks on hand are equivalent to less than three months' consumption.

A further recovery trend was seen in retail sales throughout the country despite the somewhat disappointing August showing of New York stores. In this month distribution in the metropolitan area exceeded the 1935 volume by only 3 per cent compared with an increase of 7 per cent for the nation as a whole.

The French franc, at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, was unchanged at 6.58 7-16 cents, and sterling was ⅛ of a cent higher at $5.06½.

Comments of Brokers

A periodical review of a number of market analysts as of late last week found actually none of those questioned expecting more than a few days' interruption of the uptrend.—G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.

We now feel that the limits of the next technical upturn have been more or less set, to wit, the high levels of last week.

We would continue to keep trading accounts in a strong position.—J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

Based purely on fundamentals, prices are justified to advance, with minor interruptions for technical adjustments.—R. S. Feigus, Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

So long as volume continues to dry up on dips, as it has on recent occasions, there is but little likelihood that any important setback will develop.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Whatever the immediate response may be to the election news, we still feel that any bulges in the near future will continue to invite cautious profit taking pending definite indications as to the direction of the next intermediate swing.—J. S. Bache & Co.

WHAT PATHWAY

Do We DESIRE U. S. TO Travel?

By B. C. FORBES

One important question confronting the public can be stated so simply that every intellect can grasp it.

Is far greater competition by the government, paid for by taxpayers, with industries owned by millions of small investors, desirable or undesirable, wanted or unwanted?

* * *

President Roosevelt declares in clear language that it is his fixed purpose to plunge the nation still deeper into debt for the construction of gigantic power projects unless utility companies name rates agreeable to him.

The pretense has been strenuously maintained in the courts by Washington that its principal power projects already launched were motivated by other considerations than underselling utility companies. Navigation considerations, irrigation considerations, and TVA's fertilizer manufacturing possibilities have been loudly emphasized.

But declares the President:

"If these" (Federal power projects already launched) "are not sufficient" (to bring down rates still further) "the influence of additional meritorious projects awaiting development can be added."

* * *

If the utility industry were the sole one the New Dealers aspire to usurp, the public would have less reason than they do have for feeling alarmed. The truth is that the government has already invaded dozens of different lines of business and has revealed starkly that, given sufficient license, it would tremendously multiply such activities.

It is, of course, for voters to decide whether they approve or disapprove the further enthronement of bureaucracy, the overthrow of our established American economic system, the wholesale creation of federal socialism.

Before reaching a definite conclusion, thorough knowledge of all pertinent facts should be sought.

* * *

What has happened in other countries where bureaucracy has triumphed?

Russia is the most conspicuous, longest-established example. Would the majority of Americans prefer Russian living conditions to those heretofore enjoyed in our own country? Have Americans no qualms about forfeiting their liberty, their political liberty, their economic liberty, their social liberty, their religious liberty?

Mussolini has written an important page in the world's modern history. Yet, do American citizens, do American families envy the lot of Italians? Are they eager to submit themselves to absolute autocracy?

In Germany, as in Russia and Italy, the state, bureaucracy, autocracy, dictatorship, have become unqualifiedly dominant, domineering. Do Americans crave to travel a similar road?

* * *

How has our own nation fared heretofore?

Admittedly, our political system, our financial system, our industrial system, our whole economic system has not been perfect. Nothing human is.

But which of all the nations on the face of the earth attracted the greatest number of immigrants?

Which was making the greatest progress in improving the living conditions of its inhabitants?

Which was making the greatest progress in developing wealth?

Which was striding most impressively towards industrial pre-eminence?

Which was most rapidly multiplying the savings of its people?

Which offered the greatest opportunities to the humblest to rise to the top through meritorious individual effort?

America!

* * *

It is infinitely important that a traveler be travelling in the right direction. Also a nation.

Will the United States be travelling in the right direction if its people authorize its political rulers to abandon the course charted by our founding forefathers and heretofore followed, and to embark along the bureaucratic, autocratic pathways followed by Russia, Italy, Germany?

* * *

Our present administration's attitude towards public utilities is but one of many mistaken clues to the direction in which it itches to travel.

It is up to us, to all of us who still enjoy a measure of freedom at the polls denied Russians, Italians, Germans, to register our wills.

The Constitution: Fountain of American Liberty

THE FIRST TRUE FEDERAL STATE FOUNDED ON A COMPLETE AND SCIENTIFIC BASIS WAS THE UNITED STATES—Lord Bryce, "Studies in History and Jurisprudence," 1901.

THE "scientific basis" of the United States is the CONSTITUTION, the one hundred and forty-ninth anniversary of whose adoption we will celebrate Thursday, September 17.

There have been more attempts in political and academic quarters within the last three years to discredit our Magna Charta than in all the previous years of its history.

Professor Charles A. Beard and others have sought in labored attempts to find the so-called "economic" origins of the Constitution—"origins" that would suit their own particular prejudices, generally COLLECTIVIST.

They have aimed their big guns at the Supreme Court and that Court's right of judicial review, seeking to bring thus into disrepute ALL THE FEDERAL COURTS which were created by that great document.

This attempt to take from the Supreme Court its power to review the constitutionality of measures passed by Congress and executive "MUST" orders is the very kernel of the present war on the Constitution.

Once despoil the Supreme Court of its power of review and an irresponsible Congress or an autocratic executive could destroy the people's liberties —AND LIVES—at their will.

As U. S. Circuit Court Judge Martin T. Manton said recently in a notable radio address on the right of judicial review of legislative acts, the attitude of some of our pink professors and lemon-colored "statesmen" has been occasioned by "FAULTY HISTORICAL INVESTIGATION AND NOT INFREQUENTLY INDUCED BY THE PERSISTENCE OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL PREJUDICES."

In a word, those who attack the Supreme Court and the Constitution are not interested in preserving our basic law, but are immersed in radical propagandist theories—often COMMUNISTIC.

Naturally, the Constitution, and its interpreter and defender, the Supreme Court, stand in the way of these disciples of alien gods.

These "scholars" attack the right of the Supreme Court to pass on the constitutionality of the acts of Congress and the Executive in the face of this plain language in the Constitution itself:

"THE JUDICIAL POWER OF THE UNITED STATES SHALL BE VESTED IN ONE SUPREME COURT . . . THE JUDICIAL POWER SHALL EXTEND TO ALL CASES IN LAW AND EQUITY ARISING UNDER THIS CONSTITUTION."

Another attack that is made over and over on the Constitution by its Red and Pink enemies is that it was Chief Justice John Marshall in Marbury vs. Madison, in 1803, who first "usurped" the powers of Congress by promulgating the doctrine that judicial tribunals had the right to pass on the constitutionality of acts of Congress.

NOTHING IS FURTHER FROM THE FACTS.

As early as 1792, when John Jay was Chief Justice, the Supreme Court declared a soldiers' and seamen's act unconstitutional and REVERSED WASHINGTON AND THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Thomas Jefferson said he was whole-heartedly for the Bill of Rights because "OF THE LEGAL CHECKS WHICH IT PUT IN THE HANDS OF THE JUDICIARY."

Let the American people consider now—and PARTICULARLY ON CONSTITUTION DAY—what the condition of this country would be today if the wise framers of the Constitution had left out of that document the provision for a court of final judicial review.

In that case, any "law" passed by a DEMAGOGIC CONGRESS or ordered by a DICTATORIAL EXECUTIVE would be legal.

The precious BILL OF RIGHTS could be abolished without a Supreme Court, calm and reasoning, to check the havoc.

As Judge Manton says, were a law-making body or an executive to become "omnipotent" and "despotic," the "ONLY RECOURSE WOULD BE REVOLUTION."

Our Constitution may be amended any time the people so will.

But the Supreme Court CANNOT be amended, hand-tied or abolished without the DISAPPEARANCE OF ALL OUR CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES AND ALL OUR LIBERTIES.

Let us, then, on the 17th day of September, when we celebrate the birth of our Constitution, remember gratefully that the Constitution gave us THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES TO SAFEGUARD OUR LIBERTIES.

"As Maine Goes, So Goes the Nation"

MAINE, electing a Republican Governor, a Republican Senator and three Republican Congressmen, has answered Governor Landon's question, "Do you want free government in America?"

Monday's vote, largest in Pine Tree State history, was an emphatic answer. Maine wants free government in America, intends to have free government, and overwhelmingly repudiates any political party or individual that tries to force upon the people a government not free.

All the Farley scheming, all the Brain Trust plotting and million dollar promises could not lure the electorate from its determination to return to the American principles of government, to depart from the strange combination of Socialism, Fascism and Communism that now holds sway in Washington.

Even Governor Brann's personal popularity and his tendency to stand apart from the New Deal were of no avail. His senatorial ambitions were crushed in the mighty resolution of the people to have nothing to do with Rooseveltism or with any candidate even remotely affiliated with Rooseveltism.

PLACING faith in the slogan, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," the Democratic national organization resolved several months ago to win Maine, no matter what the cost.

President Roosevelt visited the State, inspected 'Quoddy, and proclaimed, "I believe in 'Quoddy. I know you do, too. 'Quoddy will be completed."

Celebrities of all natures and kinds were rushed to Maine. Even Jack Dempsey, former ring champion, was placed upon the bandwagon. The Roosevelt praises were shouted to the skies. Every emphasis was laid upon the money Maine received, not a word uttered about the millions the State paid. The New Deal was a bountiful Santa Claus and could be still more bountiful when voters showed themselves deserving.

Back of the bandwagon, very much in the rear, stood "Jim" Farley with the mud that Tammany has found effective in previous campaigns. "Jim" flung the mud in all directions, making great noise about a few millionaires donating $50,000 to the Republicans and not even whispering about the fourteen billion dollars of the people's money being used to swing the electorate to Roosevelt.

Doleful stories of national disaster were told, general ruination predicted, and the country's extinction forecast unless Maine led the parade for Roosevelt. If promises failed, fear was supposed to send the people, cringing, to the New Deal.

IT WAS A STAKE ALL, LOSE ALL CAMPAIGN. AND DEMOCRATS PLUNGED TO THE LIMIT.

THE slogan is still, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation." And Maine's timely return to the Republican Party and free government will find a repetition throughout the United States in November.

The victory of Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., will find an endorsement in OTHER States in the election of OTHER Republican Senators.

Maine selection of three Republican Congressmen will provide the incentive for the selection of OTHER Republican Congressmen in OTHER States.

AND WHEN GOVERNOR ALFRED M. LANDON ASSUMES THE PRESIDENCY OF THE UNITED STATES, HE WILL FIND IN THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES REPUBLICANS THAT WILL SUPPORT HIS DETERMINATION TO RETURN AMERICA TO AMERICANS.

New York's Big Show

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

Five miles from the midtown skyscrapers of Manhattan, as the crow flies, is a dirty, bedraggled strip of land, infested with mosquitoes.

These insects are the direct descendants of a line that goes back at least to the American Revolution. If it had not been for their ferocious ancestors, George Washington might have been a part-time resident of Long Island. He thought of building a home in Flushing, but the mosquitoes made him think twice and he decided against it.

Few New Yorkers know the location of the Flushing Meadows. Even a Times Square taxicab driver would have to ask his way to them if the impossible should happen and he got a fare who wanted to go to them. Twelve hundred acres of marsh land, such is the parcel known as Flushing Meadows today. Twelve hundred acres of wonderland, with palaces of glass, a million lights, broad lagoons and magnificent highways—such will be the Flushing Meadows three years hence.

WASHINGTON MEMORIAL

This transformation will take place because New York, too, has gone world-fair-minded and those 1200 acres of marshland, in addition to being in the geographical heart of the city, represents the only available and low-cost site for the staging of such an exposition.

It does seem that this fair business may be a bit overdone. In three or four years we have had Chicago, San Diego, Fort Worth and one or two others.

However, New York is entitled to the big show which she is planning. She has done nothing in this line since 1853, when "An Exhibition of the Industry of all Nations" was held in the famous Chrystal Palace.

Chicago has had two world's fairs since then, Philadelphia two, and Buffalo and St. Louis each have had one. It is the custom to mark these gigantic exhibitions as celebrations of the anniversaries of important historical events. New York has recognized the precedent and sets forth that the year 1938 will be the 150th anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as President of the United States.

Washington took the oath of office in New York City in 1789 for the formal beginning of the government of the United Stats.

Having a reason, the next thing was to find a theme. Chicago's was "A Century of Progress." New York is inclined to let the imagination of science and invention run a bit wild and attempt to give us "The Century in the Making."

MILLION A DAY

The job of the designers is to set up on Flushing Meadows a city which will be entirely different from the New York of the picture postcards which lies five miles away. There is no use going in for towering architecture as that would be only aping the skyscrapers of Manhattan. They promise us something novel.

New York is shooting at a record attendance. This must pass 50,000,000 to eclipse the attendance at the Paris Fair of 1900, which ran for seven months. Chicago's "Century of Progress" of 1934 drew 40,000,000 visitors.

The New York planning is for 1,000,000 visitors a day, and when the last of the 50,000,000 or more have passed through the exit gates and the demolition begins the city will have as its profit 1200 acres of reclaimed land. That will be a handsome profit because New York acreage continues to bring fabulous prices.

London got its Crystal Palace out of its fair of 1851, Paris the Eiffel Tower, Buffalo its Museum of Arts and Sciences, and Chicago many improvements on its lake front. Thus it seems that civic improvement is not an uncommon motive for great fairs.

One thing is sure, and that is, New York will get rid of the mosquitoes which were too tough for even an old campaigner like General Washington.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 15—Gene Buck, although only in middle years, is more than other figure along the thoroughfare, Broadway's Last Guardeman. A valiant, lone defender of lost traditions on the street that once whipped the universe but is now only sparkless ashes of a glory that was.

Buck, one of the shrewdest showmen and organizers on the Rialto, is more than all else the super-sentimentalist who has never been chilled by the marbly-hearted world in which he cast his lot. He refuses to believe Broadway is no longer Broadway.

He came to the street from Detroit hugging his dream. Beginning as a song cover artist, he suddenly entered a world of darkness, stone blind! His vision returned miraculously one night in the Broadway blaze. And that bright picture is one for him that never fades.

Every noon Gene is at his table at the Lambs—a table once graced by Victor Herbert, Wilton Lackaye, and so many others now gone, to whom Gene was the fair-haired boy, gushing his later-realized ambitions. The scene and actors change. Buck does not. He still holds aloft the Broadway torch.

I wonder if others who make eating out a prowling sort of adventure are swayed by the lure of restaurant names. Last evening on a side street off upper Broadway we saw a modest sign "Home Dainties."

It was a tea-roomy, chintzy sort, splendidly named for there was delectable home cooking served in dainty portions. And by pleasant waitresses, watched over by a steel-spectacled, bosomy duenna, who took pride in their jobs. One longed for a porch hammock and the twang of guitars afterward.

And every one living or visiting in New York should have a sundown shine on a Madison square bench now and then. It is the Shoe Shine Capital of the world, there being more shiners there than in any other given area.

Many races are represented, even to the Hindu-looking fellow with a turban. There is a one-legged shiner and one with but a single arm.

All, too, show a pride in their calling . . . Some painted their boxes bright colors, others bossing them with brass tacks, and one idealist who tucks a fresh flower behind his ear.

Most customers are established residents from boarding and rooming houses fringing the square. They are the pipe smokers who come with knitting wives and pet dogs to make the evening shine a rite—like squirrel feeders in Central Park and rented chair sitters in the Bois.

Why columnists wind up with the jitters: "I am coming to New York for my first visit. Have only four days and don't want to miss anything. I'm a stranger to you but have read you for years and would like at least two afternoons and two evenings so you can show me personally the many things you have written about. P. S. So there will be no misunderstanding, all expenses Dutch."

Whatever the fate of Jimmy Johnston, the fight matchmaker at the Garden, he has been the most colorful figure in fistics since Tex Rickard.

For 10 years, they have been trying to razor Jimmy of authority. But Jimmy, a wiry Irishman, always bobs up again, top side gallant, with cigar at a perky angle and hat at a cocky tilt. He thrives on fighting, literally. If there isn't a scrap he will stir up one.

Scrapping is not only his trade but his diversion.

That recent guffaw for the Social Register—the discovery that an unpedigreed peke had been listed as a member of a family—has caused deep grief among its sponsors. One of the last straws, as it were, for the book seems to be losing prestige gradually.

Symphonic stuff: We have an ambitious slide trombonist in our block who practices at my shaving period every morning. I have gone through all of his agonizing graduations—his sour notes affecting me like a slate pencil pulled through clenched teeth—without murmuring.

But today I rebel. I was shaving in rhythm to his waltz tune when he hiccuped on a high note and I have a nick in my chin that would make a dimple for a hippo.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

It is reported from Washington that IF President Roosevelt is reelected he will submit to Congress a far-reaching plan of governmental reorganization. If President Roosevelt wanted to reorganize the Federal setup to abolish or consolidate departments and bureaus, and to cut down expenses, AS HE PROMISED FOUR YEARS AGO HE WOULD DO he could have done that long ago. All the time he has been in office he has had a Congress which would rubber-stamp anything he proposed, no matter how fantastic that might be.

President Roosevelt has been talking reorganization of the Federal government for a long time. He has been talking economy and tax reduction too. But the policy of his Administration along these lines has been the very opposite of his preaching. The Democrats used to assail former President Hoover for appointing so many commissions. But he was a piker, compared with the New Dealers, in setting up new governmental agencies and adding to the taxpayers' burdens.

Many citizens are fearful that if President Roosevelt does undertake governmental reorganization it will be along the lines followed by Mussolini and Hitler, taking unto himself still more power. The New Deal idea of simplifying government seems to be concentration of authority over everything and everybody in the White House.

The action of the War Department in contracting to buy more than 1,000,000 pounds of sugar from Java for use of American troops in the Philippines is outrageous. And so is the idea of admitting this sugar duty free into the islands. It should be the policy of our government to "Buy American." It is almost inconceivable that any Federal Department should even consider purchase from a foreign country of anything we can produce.

The Philippines produce more sugar than they know what to do with. It was the big increase in their production which was largely responsible for the distressed condition of our domestic sugar industry a few years ago. If the War Department purchased 1,000,000 pounds of Philippine sugar for its troops in the islands, that would reduce by 1,000,000 pounds Philippine exports to the United States and give our American farmers a chance to produce another million pounds of beet sugar. But our New Dealers appear to be more interested in playing Santa Claus to sugar producers in Java and Cuba.

The United States is still supposed to be looking our for the Philippines and acting as a guardian for them during the transition period provided in granting them independence. It certainly is a queer kind of guardianship which discriminates against their most important industry and brings in duty-free imports of sugar from a rival producer.
